

FASHION LEATHER 'PERSUADERS'

90 Percent of Animal Whips Made in Little Factory

By VIC JACOBS

Moundsville, W. Va. (AP)—In the frowning shadows of the state penitentiary, there's a busy little plant where whips are forever being cracked.

For it is at this plant that 90 per cent of all animal whips are made—products ranging from the 65-foot lash especially styled in the early 1920's for Douglas Fairbank's use in the "Mark of Zorro" to the riding crops toted by the horse set.

The "whip factory" is what they've labelled the plant but for all official intents and purposes it's the J. C. Bardall Co. Here, T. L. Rogerson and his 45 employees—eschewing modern assembly line methods—braid and fashion by hand the leather "persuaders."

Admiral Richard E. Byrd used specially-made dog whips on his first trip to the North Pole and the two succeeding expeditions to the South Pole. Roy Rogers, a top celluloid cowboy, uses Bardall whips in his flickers.

Most of the leather ropes used in teaching dogs for military service during World War II were also turned out here. The greater portion were air-mailed to overseas K-9 training centers.

Although it supplies the globe, the plant's business is concentrated principally in the west. Ranchers—both dude and orthodox—beat a steady path to the whip factory's door bringing orders for singular designs.

One of the more recent specialties was a 35-foot rodeo whip for a Wyoming rancher that took almost a day to make. Four hours was required for the braiding job alone. In 1939, a 65-foot whip was fashioned for the Ringling Bros., Barnum and Bailey Circus' ringmaster.

The plant maintains its own tannery using grease, oil and soap to make the leather going into its products soft and pliable.

Every worker in the factory—some with as much as 25 years' service—is a specialist in his field. That includes the cutters, braiders, sewers and button makers.

"String" cutting in which a razor-sharp knife is used is the most intricate part of the process because of the uniform thickness in which strips must be cut from the tanned hides.

The plant also produces nose bands, lariats, dog leashes, canes, riding quirts, lanyards, black-jacks and policemen's billies.

In business nearly three-quarters of a century, the Bardall enterprise operated inside the state penitentiary until 1935, when Congress passed the Hawes-Cooper law forbidding the operation of private industry inside penal institutions.

Church Council Guest At Mrs. Finley Home

Dayton—The Woman's Council of the Christian church met at the home of Mrs. J. L. Finley with eighteen members and one guest, Mrs. John Diehm of Redrock, Okla., present. Mrs. Vernon Foster, assisted by Mrs. Oliver Callahan and Mrs. Clele Gell, had charge of the devotional period and lesson.

Mrs. Ila Paris and Mrs. Callahan are leaders for the contests, which involves attendance, reading and membership. The next meeting will be with Mrs. Callahan October 20, with Mrs. Frank Foster as the leader. Refreshments were served.

Ediger Hospitalized

Hopewell—Jamie Ediger of Hopewell district, who has been ailing for about two months and receiving treatments and examinations at Veterans' hospital, Portland, entered the hospital and will remain in bed until recovery is more lasting. He served during World War II in the Seabees in navy overseas. His wife and small son are staying with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Stockhoff, in the Wheatland district.

George Spaur Acting Forester

The state forestry board has named George Spaur, a deputy since 1946, to the post of acting state forester until a permanent appointment can be made.

Gov. Douglas McKay told the board that a memorial to the late Nelson Rogers should be established. He said it should be in keeping with the accomplishments of the state forester who died Sunday.

The board members held a brief meeting after attending the funeral of the late forester held Wednesday afternoon.

Bridge Club Guest

Dayton—The Krowledeen Bridge club met at the home of Mrs. Floyd Willert. Mrs. Paul Londershausen and Mrs. Clare Heider were special guests. Three tables of bridge was in play with high honors going to Mrs. Londershausen, and Mrs. Carl Mitchell held low score. The next meeting will be with Mrs. Frank Wright in Newberg. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

John Glidden invented the first practical barbed wire in 1872.

Lyons Lodge Plans Boy Scout Benefit

Lyons—Faith Rebekah lodge met at the hall with the following officers in the chairs, Frances McCarley, noble grand, Blanche Wagner, vice grand, Garnett Bassett, secretary and Celene Taylor, treasurer. Beulah Lewis was installed as warden to replace Mildred Carr who is unable to attend due to illness.

Plans were made and a date to set later for a supper for the Boy Scouts and their parents. This is to be an outstanding affair as the Rebekahs sponsor the scouts. It was also decided to meet at the hall September 21, for the purpose of canning fruit and vegetables for the old people's home.

At the close of the evening refreshments were served by the committee, Helen Anderson, Mabel Bass and Effie Heineck.
