

Catholic Charities Ready to Aid All Who Come to Door

"We help anyone who comes to our door," says Mrs. D. J. McLellan, social worker for the Salem office of the Catholic Charities, one of the local agencies depending upon the Salem Community Chest to assist them with funds.

Sitting in her small office in the Pacific building, next to the Capitol theater, Mrs. McLellan pointed out that the Catholic Charities is an organization devoted to giving emergency relief, locating foster homes for children, operating a small youth organization and assisting other unfortunates in their problems. For the services covered by the local agency the Red Feather Drive will ask the people of Salem to contribute a minimum of $3,800 to complete the charities' annual budget.

"We try to cooperate with the other agencies in town whenever possible. In most cases we don't duplicate our services when another agency is on the job," Mrs. McLellan said. "A lot of our work goes to helping transient people who need a night's lodging and a package of groceries. When we have investigated the need we supply them with vouchers that may be traded for the needed food at local stores. In some cases we find jobs, homes, and even supply a few clothes," Mrs. McLellan explained.

The sole representative of the Catholic Charities, she often spends her free hours of the day, when her cases are completed, mending and darning clothing that can be used by the needy. Another of the services of the Catholic Charities is to give counsel to runaway girls. "If the girl is free from trouble with the authorities we attempt to make her feel at home and then get in touch with her relatives. We find jobs for the girls and see that they are housed in good surroundings," the worker explained.

"As far as transient emergency relief is concerned we spend about $165 per month. Some of this money is returned by a few of the people we help. About $50 in clothing is given out every month, and we help the young people as much as possible by hiring a hall for their activities. We have other work that is not a general donation or a long time charity. The organization is not set up to carry on relief over a long period. The local agency works in conjunction with Catholic Char-

Honest Girl Gets Reward Finally

Topeka, Kan. (AP)—Honesty brought its reward, a bankroll of $1,794 to Cecilia Blodgett.

A court decided she was entitled to that sum, the amount in currency she found in a dresser drawer in a hospital sick-room.

The room was occupied by her father, Michael Blodgett. His condition was too critical to learn from him if the money was his, and he died without being questioned.

Instead of putting the cash in her purse and keeping quiet about it, Miss Blodgett turned the money over to the hospital for safekeeping.

After a year, without anyone establishing ownership, she asked the hospital for the money, and found she had to file a suit for it.

Heirs of Joseph Schmidt, who also had died in room 302, claimed the currency. Some of the claimants were relatives in Germany.

Judge Dean McElhenny ruled in favor of the finder. He said evidence did not point toward the money having been Schmidt's.
