Bonn Asks End to Plant Dismantling

Bonn, Germany, Sept. 30 (AP)—The parliament (Bundestag) of the new West German republic decided today to ask the western allies to halt German factory dismantling.

It asked that the allies recheck the dismantling list to determine what plants could be removed from it, and to stop present and contemplated dismantling in the meantime.

The dismantling issue came up as the first major item on the agenda after members of parliament had debated a week on the conservative government's general policy program.

Ohmart Talks On Appraisals

"The common horse sense approach" is the essence of any true appraisal of real property, Lee Ohmart, Salem real estate broker learned during a course of study taken at Salt Lake City recently. He spoke before Salem realtors during their Friday luncheon.

Ohmart was one of a number of real estate men from 17 western states who took the course in appraisal as provided by the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisals. The course was a thorough one, Ohmart reported, leaving little time for outside diversion.

The scientific approach to arriving at the value of a certain piece of property played a prominent part in the course of instruction, with stress being placed on the income angle. The cost approach is being forced more or less into the background because of a decline in sales values.

The realtors took preliminary steps toward raising the minimum sales fee from $25 to $50 and the charge for an appraisal from a $15 minimum to $25.

Last Day of Allied Airlift to Berlin

Rhine-Main Airbase, Germany, Sept. 30 (AP)—This big American airbase is as quiet today as a top sergeant with mumps.

It is the last day of the once-great allied airlift to blockaded Berlin. Tonight a big C-54 loaded with coal will fly the final flight east in what once was an endless skyway of planes bridging the Russian blockade.

Corn Support Price Set at $1.50 a Bushel

Veteran Postal Employee Quits

Philip Aspinwall, who has been in postal work for over 45 years, 37 years of that time with the Salem post office, retired Friday. Only Paul Miller, assistant postmaster, has worked longer at the Salem post office.

Aspinwall, who lives at 645 Market street, started his career for Uncle Sam as assistant postmaster at Brooks and at Rainier. Then getting into then civil service in 1910 he started on June 15 of that year as clerk at the post office in Hood River. His transfer to Salem was June 1, 1912.

His first work here, of course, was in the old Salem post office building which was moved to the Willamette campus as a law college building in 1937 when the new post office was dedicated.

"When I went to work here," he recalls, "there were 24 employees. Now there are over 100. Mail was delivered on the rural routes by horseback, and one of my jobs, of which I had several, was dividing the mail.

"The post card is about the only thing that hasn't changed. It sold for a penny then, and still does."

For the last 10 years Aspinwall has been at the stamp window. He has always been classified as a clerk. For some years he was in charge of insurance and COD claims. He assisted in setting up the social security procedure at the Salem post office.

Aspinwall has a small acreage on Highway 99E north of the city, and expects to put in most of his time there, though he is going to travel a bit, he says, and enjoy a vacation without worrying about getting back on the job.

Mr. and Mrs. Aspinwall have two daughters, Mrs. Douglas Chambers of Salem and Mrs. Roger Quackenbush of Astoria.

Postmaster Albert C. Gregg expressed regret at Aspinwall's departure. He said that Wilbur C. Cavender, a senior clerk, would take his place at the wholesale stamp window.

Comdr. Lanigan Views Facility

One of the naval men responsible for Salem's being chosen as a site for the Naval Air Facility, Comdr. E. J. Lanigan, from the office of chief of naval operations, Washington, D. C., was back to have a look at the facility Friday afternoon.

Lanigan, with Comdr. D. A. McIsaac, executive officer with the Naval Air Reserve Training Unit, Seattle; Comdr. Robert Gardner, of the public works office, Seattle, came into Salem from Seattle shortly after noon on a navy R4D. Pilot of the plane was Lt. C. C. Davis.

The Washington officer is on a routine visit to the Pacific coast and will be inspecting naval installations along the coastal area before returning.

While here the officers checked on the water supply available for the facility. They also brought plans for the heating plant to be installed at the facility.

Little-Wheat Going Abroad

Washington, Sept. 30 (AP)—American wheat is moving abroad in a mere trickle despite bargain prices put into effect Aug. 1.

Less than 10,000,000 bushels of the 168,000,000-bushel lot put on the counter for the year ending July 31, 1950, have been taken by foreign buyers.

At the present time, the price averages about 45 cents a bushel under what Americans themselves have to pay.

The special foreign sales price was set up under terms of an international wheat agreement which went into effect Aug. 1. The agreement is designed to as-

Abrams to See Sea Maneuvers

Viewing the amphibious maneuvers of the Second Infantry division and the Second Task Fleet in Hawaii next month will be a Salem man, Col. Carrie Abrams.

Abrams was invited by the secretary of the army, Gordon Gray, to make the trip. He has been instructed to arrive at the headquarters of the amphibious command, Pacific, at Coronado, Calif., not later than October 7.

The maneuvers have been arranged to afford joint army-navy training in amphibious operations. Leaving San Diego about October 9, they are to be dispatched to Hawaii, where they will destroy the "aggressor" and recapture Oahu Island. The Task Fleet is to arrive back in the United States about November 13.

Abrams plans to leave Salem next Thursday for Coronado, Calif., to join the group accompanying the troops on the maneuvers. He is chairman of Salem's army advisory committee and last year completed 50 years of service with the army reserves, army, and National Guard.

$22,500 Pay for Cabinet Jobs

Washington, Sept. 30 (AP)—President Truman's cabinet members can look forward with assurance today to a pay boost following senate approval of a bill to raise them from their present $15,000 a year to $22,500.

The senate action, taken on a 52 to 14 vote last night, sent the measure back to the house, which previously had voted the department heads a $25,000 salary. Both bills also call for pay increases for a long list of other high government officials. Their differences must now be ironed out in conferences.

All 37 democrats present in the senate voted for the pay in-
