

Truman Sees War Games

Fort Bragg, N.C., Oct. 4 (AP)—President Truman today watched top-secret combat equipment of the army field forces in action at war games staged for his benefit here.

The chief executive, accompanied by Army Secretary Gordon Gray and Gen. J. Lawton Collins, army chief of staff, came here by plane this morning.

After reviewing an honor guard at Pope field, the president drove immediately to army field forces board one, a research center where highly secret radar and artillery firing devices were demonstrated for him.

So secret was the demonstration that White House reporters were kept 300 yards from the area where the president conducted his inspection. Reporters stood with army post school children and watched huge weather balloons sent aloft with glittering metal attachments slung beneath them.

Across a broad grassy field, huge radar screens were seen turning slowly to follow the upward path of the balloons.

Mr. Truman left Washington at 8:45 a.m. EST, and arrived at Pope field at 9:37 a.m.

36-Year-Old Search for Kin Ends in Reunion Plans

Lusk, Wyo. (AP)—Eighty-two-year-old Mose Bourgojn of Lusk, who spent 20 years searching for his family, has been reunited with them after 36 years of separation.

Bourgojn left his home in Canada 36 years ago to search for contact with his family. They had moved and he could find no trace of them.

About 20 years ago he began a systematic search which included writing letters to all people in Canada who might know of them, a personal search through Canada, and a five-year hunt by the Canadian Mounted Police.

It was to no avail. Even the Mounties gave up the job.

Continuing his search alone, Bourgojn began inserting small personal ads in Canadian newspapers. Finally a friend of one of his daughters saw a notice and called her, Mrs. Lloyd McFarlane of Wilcox, Saskatchewan.

In turn, she called another daughter, Mrs. W. C. Metzger of Minneapolis, Minn., and they called Bourgojn. They came to Lusk to visit their father.

Bourgojn found he still has a brother and 91-year-old sister living in Canada. Besides the two daughters who visited him, he has three sons in Canada whom he expects to visit.

STANDING FEUD BREAKS OUT

Entertainment for Lunch Meeting Gets Too Realistic

Knoxville, Tenn. (AP)—It was the weekly luncheon meeting of the City Salesmen's club and automobile dealer Ross Reeder had the floor.

Reeder began tongue-lashing another club member who was present, J. J. Harris.

"The club isn't big enough for me and Harris both," Reeder shouted, "and I want a standing vote on who stays."

For six weeks everybody in the club knew, Harris and Reeder had been at daggers-points. Nobody saw them together any more. They didn't even speak to each other at the annual picnic. And they had done a lot of talking behind each other's back.

At the meeting, Reeder confronted Harris and accused him of making accusations about his personal life.

"I'm calling you a liar to your face, Harris," said Reeder.

Harris jumped to his feet and whipped out a pistol. Taft Sykes, a visitor, leaped up to Intercept Harris and just then the gun roared. Sykes jumped to the floor, and the 30-odd others ran for cover beneath tables or out the door.

The situation was tense. State Sen. E. B. Bowles, another member, knelt down beside Sykes and moaned, "Lord, fellows, he's hurt—hurt bad."

Another member finally persuaded Harris to hand over the gun.

But then the joke was up. The gun held a spent blank cartridge.

It was all a joke. Harris and Reeder, explained. Reeder had the program that day and they had been planning their "feud" for weeks.

State Employees May Sign Recall Petitions

State employees may sign recall petitions.

But, ruled Attorney General George Neuner, they can't circulate the petitions, nor circulate initiative or referendum petitions, nor actively engage in political campaigns.

The question was asked by the state liquor commission.
