Pittsburgh Coach Named Top of Week by Press

By STAN OPTOWSKY
New York, Oct. 6 (AP)—He was bred in the tradition of the single wing and becomes enraged when anyone calls it "old fashioned."

He nearly lost his job the first year he had it—but a hastily organized student-alumni committee stepped in just in time.

And he came through for those who struck out their necks to save his.

He is the United Press coach of the week, Mike Milligan of Pittsburgh university, whose much-maligned Panthers roared forth with the season's biggest upset Saturday when they defeated Northwestern's Rose Bowl champions, 16 to 7.

"You would have loved those kids," Milligan said after the victory. "They were rarin' to go and, gosh, they did."

"I can only hope we can be the same next week when we meet West Virginia, they'll be laying for us."

The triumph was not just a ball game—or even one big ball game—for Milligan. It meant vindication of the theories which nearly cost him his job. He had been bred in the single wing of Jock Sutherland as a guard on the Pitt powerhouses of the 1930's.

He joined the Pitt coaching staff in 1934, served as line coach from 1938 to 1941, and at Tulsa from '41 to '46.

In '46 he returned to Pitt as line coach under Wes Fester, and the next year took over as head coach.

His first season was a dismal failure. The team only won one game but, oddly, it was the

Brooklyn in the Bronx

A touch of Brooklyn was transplanted to the New York Bronx for the first game of the world series as the faithful gathered to see dem Bums grapple with the Yankees. Apron and all, Mrs. Carrie Koschnick (center) of Brooklyn braved the trip into the hinterlands beyond the East river, but came well fortified with groceries. Helping whoop things up during lunch is Mrs. Mary Widman (right) of Maspeth, in Brooklyn's neighboring borough of Queens. The Yankees won the game, though, 1 to 0, with a ninth-inning homer by Tommy Henrich. (AP Wirephoto) faculty committee on athletics which asked for his resignation. The students and alumni, who usually handle the wolf-at-the-door chores for college coaches, formed a committee and demanded that the trustees give Milligan another chance.

It was the single wing that was the root of the ruckus. The faculty committee thought it was outdated. Milligan thinks differently.

"It requires good blocks and tackling, the essence of all modern day systems. Our single actually is different from most versions. We use different reverses than the old Pitt teams and we pull the man-in-motion frequently."

Weekend Holds Key to PCC Title

By RUSS NEWLAND

San Francisco, Oct. 6 (AP)—This is the week that should determine whether either the University of California at Los Angeles or Stanford, or both, are first class coast conference championship football timber.

The outcome of their tough game at Palo Alto no doubt will tab the winner as one of the three clubs most likely to end up with the title next month. The other two strong contenders at this time are Southern California and California.

Of their three games to date, UCLA rates the nod over Stanford. The Bruins have crushed Oregon State, Iowa and favored Oregon in succession. Stanford was badly outclassed by Michigan, 7-27, but; how many teams are beating Michigan these days?

Michigan ground Stanford into the turf with a mixed assortment of plays off the single wing. Coach Henry, "Red" Sanders uses a variation of the wing.

The UCLA punch appears far less effective than Michigan's Stanford is back in its own class this time. We like Stanford to bounce back.

Southern California gets its stiffest test thus far against the invading Ohio State Buckeyes. Jeff Cravath's big Trojan team was the pre-season conference favorite. A win over formidable Ohio State would clinch the role.

The weekly picks: (Last week 21 wins, 7 losses, 2 ties).

FRIDAY:

Montana over Colorado A & M by 6.
Loyola over Fresno State by 10.
San Jose State over Pepperdine by 14.
Whitworth over Central Washington by 7.
North Idaho over Whitman by 1.

Cardinals Gear Work for Game With Portland

Concentrating on aerial defense and attack, Sacred Heart's Cardinals are spending long hours in preparing for next Saturday night's grid contest with Columbia Prep of Portland. The contest is scheduled for Waters field at 8 o'clock.

By converting Jim Hoenan from a tackle to a halfback position, Coach Father O'Callaghan hopes to give his Cards additional scoring punch.

With the exception of Jim Lancaster, the Cards are in good condition. Lancaster sustained a charley horse in last week's Salem high Jayvee contest.
