Jay saw the dark outlines of possibly a dozen crude shacks and at least fifteen corrals farther out on the prairie. The horse raider must have been pretty sure of his strength and cumning to have such a big camp within thirty or forty miles of a big ranch.

They rode up and swung down A dozen or so riders lounged about both on the porch and inside.

"Loo, boys." Pennock greeted them as they mounted the porch. "Look who I got with me."

"H. Joe," several men greeted Allison, though there was something curious, almost strained in their looks. Jay knew that word of Joe's getting shot in the raid on Randall's Morgans was bound to spread. Hed just have to let things go and see what happened.

They went inside and a pretty, dark-faced, dark-eyed girl who was either half or full-blooded Mexican bright glance.

"So? You have come back at last?" she asked, and he caught the faint trace of an accent in her voke.

"Yep, he's come back Lucia."

"Yep, he's come back Lucia."

"Who is this old man Randall?"
she demanded. Pennock, with a guffaw, replied for him. "Shucks, Lucia, didn't he ever tell you as how he's going to marry Randall's ranch one of these days? That gai over there—"

"So?" Lucia demanded. "I let "So?" Lucia demanded. "I let "Con Fiss me an' now you have an-

"So?" Lucia demanded. "I let you kiss me an' now you have another girl all the time."

Jay squirmed at the laughter of several men and was glad when the flounced over and leaned beside Turk.

"That's all right, honey," he drawled, and slid an arm around her waist. "I'll kiss you any time, and I aln't got no other girl."

A lithe-looking, Mexican rider, moved in, wariness in every movement of his body. "Lucia, she is my girl," he said in slow, precise English. "You keep away from her, Joe. You understand?"
"Take it easy, Miguel," grinned Turk.
