

Two Guys Named Joe Walking back to the Yankee dressing room after the last world series at Ebbets Field, Joe DiMaggio flings a fatherly arm around the shoulder of his son Joe Jr., 8. There's a possi-bility that the Yankee Clipper may have played his last game, and it is fitting that he hit a long home run to help the Yanks beat the Dodgers, 10-6. DiMaggio Question Waits Springtime Training Work

New York, Oct. 11 (18)—
There might have been a question today whether Joe DiMaggio had reached the sud of baseball trail-but there was no question that if he had he certainly went out in a blaze of

Gaunt and pale, the Yankee clipper sweated through the first four games of the World series with one scratch hit in 14 times at bat. He was swinging times at bat. with bitter futility, his power gone with a virus infection which hadn't been able to keep which hadn't been able to keep old authority. him out of the chips down class-

But he finally put his own personal trademark on the fifth game of his eighth ser-ies, as the Yankees wrapped it up, by belting a curve ball off Jack Banta far into the left

And as the clipper circled the bases with that familiar lope the crowd of 33,000 rose to a man and gave Joe a blood-chill- For Losing Team ing ovation. This blow didn't de-cide the fifth and final game. But it was one of the things the customers had come to see.
"No home run I've ever hit has given me more satisfac-tion," DiMaggio said later, as the Yankees swirled around him in the hot little dressing room in wild celebration. None had ever given the Yancees more either.

"You're a real champion, Joe," said Tommy Henrich, an old pro who has seen a lot of the stars come and go. "You're a guy with real guts." Little Joe, the clipper's eight-madge Bussey, 26-year-old Detroit lightweight, lay near death today after being knocked out in the ninth round of a ring battle last night.

Surgeons performed a delicate operation to remove a blood clot from his brain. Several hours later they reported the fighter's condition "slight-ly improved but still critical." Bussey and Luther Rawlings of Chicago fought.

A hard left to the jaw knocked the Detroit Negro unconscious in the eighth round. The bell rang before the referee had finished counting him out, and his seconds revived him to start the ninth

But with Bussey ready to collapse, Referee Herman Spinelli stopped the fight aft-er only a blow or two had been struck in the ninth. Rawlings was awarded a technical knockout, and Bussey fell un-conscious to the mat.
