

DOUBLE TROUBLE

By WILLIAM HOBSON

Chapter 27
Daylight broke over the settlement, cool and quiet. Not a sound disturbed the early rising of the dark creek in the east. Jay crossed the creek, his horse stumbling and snorting as he fell into the water. He had ridden down. He saw the dosing remnants in the coral, watered and fresh, and he looked back again at the horizon. Three miles behind him there stood a fresh dust name.

The Morgans were coming. Jay looked at the skyline, but there didn't seem to be a breath of life anywhere. It was forlorn, dead, deserted. But he knew that out there in the brush, grim-lipped men with Winchester's flat on their bellies and watched the on-coming dust haze.

He was riding in the willows and then unseated, turning loose a death trap, when the life of his brother and a beautiful half Spanish girl was at stake. Forlorn Lucia! He hoped that some kind of cruel fate would not, at the last moment, send her to follow. Turk Penrock in a fresh horse dug up on the slope back of the cabin. She was young, beautiful, intelligent, pretty well educated.

Gervais Altar Group Guest Manning Home
Gervais — Mrs. Fred Manning's home was the meeting place of the St. Rita Altar society with 15 members attending. Final plans were made for the fall social and dinner. Get well cards were sent to their two hospitalized members, Marie Mangold and Mrs. Victor Viggil.

Manning served refreshments. The November hostess group will be Mrs. Frank Eder, Mrs. Frank Nosack and Mrs. Stanley Seguin at a place of meeting to be announced later.

Tuckers Buy Farm
Gates—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tucker have purchased the farm east of Gates on the Linn county side of the river known as the Lawson place. This is one of the larger farms in this locality.
