

Leahy Picks Beavers over WSC, Iowa over Webfoots

By FRANK LEAHY
(Head Football Coach
University of Notre Dame)

Last week's surprising upsets throughout the nation caused our predicting average to fall below .800 for the first time this fall, and it is with added zest that we scan tomorrow's tussles in an attempt to raise our overall average of .792.

Pacific Coast conference fans will have an opportunity to see the teams of two of that group's most successful coaches in action as California and UCLA meet.

Lynn Waldorf and Red Sanders are relatively new names in the California coaching profession, but each has proven that he is capable of handling such top notch material and we feel that the experience of Coach Waldorf will cause the Berkeley Bears to emerge with the victory as their record remains unspotted.

Southern California is expected to remain on the Bears' heels by downing Washington, as Oregon State defeats Washington State in the remaining conference clash. Up and coming Santa Clara challenges powerful Stanford and our opinion is that Stanford is just a bit too strong.

San Francisco's Ollie Matson should provide Nevada with many problems as he and his teammates score another win. Coach Joe Verducci is turning in an outstanding job at St. Mary's this fall and his Gaels are favored over Drake, while one of the nation's best, Wyoming, gets the nod over Brigham Young.

Texas is still in an uproar over the amazing victories achieved by Rice and Southern Methodist last Saturday, and tomorrow is bound to provide the Southwesterners with another thriller as Southern Methodist and Texas U. lock horns in Dallas.

This contest has all the markings of a conference title clash, and in such an important game we definitely must go along with Southern Methodist.

After hearing last week's game with Kentucky on the radio we became convinced that SMU is the type of team that "can't be beat because they won't be beat" and they have our vote.

Of equal importance is the Baylor-Texas Christian game in which we favor undefeated Baylor. Rice is the heavy favorite over Texas Tech and Arkansas should continue its fine brand of ball as they outscore Texas A & M. Moving into Kansas we see the University of Kansas edging out Kansas State in a traditional game.

Michigan's victory over Minnesota has thrown the Big Nine title and subsequent Rose Bowl bid up for grabs, and the Wolverines will knock out the next leading contender as they journey to Illinois tomorrow.

Two other top contenders, Minnesota and Ohio State, will not lose any ground as they are defeating Purdue and Northwestern.

Two unpredictable events meet as Wisconsin takes on Indiana, and we pick the Badgers with our fingers crossed because we know the Hoosiers can win if they click.

Intersectional games will see Iowa, Michigan State, and Marquette subduing Oregon, Temple, and Colorado State, as visiting teams, Missouri, Oklahoma, and Brown overpower Nebraska, Iowa State, and Western Reserve. The high flying Flyers from Dayton U. are expected to remain as such by beating Xavier.

Southern schedules are arriving at the point where the majority of the teams are meeting traditional rivals and in some of the important games we predict Wake Forest, LSU and Georgia Tech will defeat Clemson, Mississippi, and Duke.

Four of the South's top teams were upset last week-end and we feel that Cincinnati, Alabama, Tennessee, and Auburn, will feel the wrath of Kentucky, Georgia, North Carolina, and Vanderbilt as they attempt to regain their prominence. Other important games in that area favor Tulane, Maryland, William and Mary, and Virginia, over Mississippi State, South Carolina, Richmond, and West Virginia.

Eastern emperors, Army, Cornell and Pennsylvania will preserve their untarnished records at the expense of VMI, Columbia and Pittsburgh, with the latter team putting up the strongest battle before being subdued.

In New England we look for the return to the victory column of both Harvard and Boston College as they defeat Holy Cross and Villanova. Harvard's schedule speaks much more for the team than does its record to date, but we look for a turnaround from Art Valpey's boys. Boston's most successful team, Boston University, should be able to name its score with Scranton, while the Yale Bowl will see a close game with Yale edging out Dartmouth. In football's oldest rivalry we are picking Princeton to down Rutgers.

Realizing that this is the season for upsets in football, we are proceeding into the Navy game with the utmost caution. No one knows any better than our squad, unless it be the Army squad, how capable the Midshipmen are of stopping a winning streak.

Oregon College of Education, Monmouth—"I'll find out if it is real," says Martha Durette, Salem's 1947 Cherry Festival queen, as she tugs at the Homecoming Whiskerino display on the chin of John Herbert, of Noti, general chairman of OCE's big week-end for grads (Oct. 28-30). Others testing the beard are Mary Swart, of Portland, a freshman, and Phyllis Zenger, a sophomore transfer from Lewis and Clark, whose home is in Klamath Falls. ## OCE Wolves Host East Oregonians For Homecoming

Monmouth — An under-rated Eastern Oregon College of Education football "11" will provide the competition for the OCE Wolves come Saturday and the traditional "Homecoming" battle. The Wolves' record is without a blemish in five games, while the Mountaineers have yet to come through with victory.

The Mountain boys, coached by former Oregon State athlete Bob Quinn, operate from the single wing formation. They have an excellent passer in frosh halfback Harry Winston, who tossed four touchdown passes against the College of Idaho. The Idaho gridders were nearly upset by the EOC club, who have had two weeks to prepare for the Wolves. Reports from La Grande indicate the Mountaineers are pointing for the Wolves and will take the field here Saturday with an upset in mind.

Coach Bill McArthur has hopes of herding his Wolves through an undefeated season, but he is clearly worried as to the outcome of the Homecoming tussle. He knows that the Mountaineers are dead set on victory here Saturday, and is quite aware that his Wolves may have a tendency to slack off in view of the two teams' opposite seasonal records.

Zupke Recounts Grange's Wild Win for Anniversary

(Editor's note: Bob Zupke, 39-year-old retired University of Illinois football coach, tomorrow will celebrate his 25th anniversary of Harold "Red" Grange's feat of striking four touchdowns in the first 12 minutes of the 20-14 upset of undefeated Michigan.)

It was the greatest triumph in Zupke's illustrious coaching career.

Tomorrow Michigan, engages Illinois again at Champaign before 11,000. Bob Zupke, in his celebration, will be 39 of his former football captains, one for each of the 28 years he served at Illinois starting in 1913. Zupke, in the following story written for the Associated Press, tells of that memorable 1924 game.

After all, if "Red" had just kept making touchdowns it soon wouldn't have meant anything.

I remember that before the game I had the players on the field when the sudden thought to remove their stockings struck me. It was an unusually warm day and I felt the players might get relief by removing their stockings.

Fielding Yost (Michigan's coach) immediately suspected a trick—I was supposed to be a sly guy you know—and had the officials feel our boys' legs to see if they were greased. It wasn't a trick—just trying to make the players feel cool.

In the locker room, too, I remember drawing a gigantic "X" on the blackboard and stressing to Grange that this was the way he must run. Grange, you know, liked to head for the sidelines. He was taught to reverse at Illinois. I recall saying over and over to Grange: "Reverse, 'Red,' reverse."

Men's Clubbers Name Nominators For Annual Meet

The Salem Men's club Thursday night named George Hoffman, "Wif" Needham and John Emlen members of the nominating committee to present a slate of new officers during the annual meeting of the organization scheduled for Nov. 17.

With about 60 persons in attendance, trophies and prizes were distributed for winners in two events, the Salem Golf Club fall championship and last Sunday's two ball foursome.

Ralph Mapes passed out the prizes for the foursome program and Bill Goodwin acted in a similar capacity for the tournament. Jack Russell received the large trophy emblematic of the club championship, the first time he has held this honor. He had won the Elks club tournament a couple years ago. Leo Estey won the runner-up trophy.

Duane Pillette made his first major league start for the Yankees in Detroit's Briggs stadium
