Alfred W. Loucks

Loucks Hurls

Loucks made his announcement with the following statement: "Since I received L. Eifstrom's recent announcement that he did not plan again to be a candidate for mayor, many of my friends in Salem have suggested that I place my name on the ballot for this office. "Being on the one hand vitally interested in everything that has to do with the best interests of Salem, and on the other wanting to stay away from the problems of politics and politicians, this has been a difficult decision for me to make.

"Realizing that the attitude of evasion of responsibility, together with the fear of public criticism, has left many who have a real interest in a strong and growing community for public office, I have reached the conclusion that many of our citizens must step forward and do something about our city rather than sit back and criticize those who make the effort. Feeling that this is true, I am pleased to announce my desire to become a candidate for the office of Mayor.

"It is my hope that others having a serious interest in the elective and appointive offices of Salem will join with me in the coming campaign. Salem is a rapidly developing, fine American community. We urgently need the cooperation of its citizens to guide this development along sound, constructive and worthwhile paths."

Loucks is head of the Home Fuel Oil company, 1710 North Commercial street, and his home is at 250 West Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Loucks have two

Ford Car Forced On Governor

Oregon's No. 1 Chevrolet dealer, Governor Douglas McKay, now has a Ford as one of his two official cars. It's because of a prank played on him by a Salem Ford dealer, William L. Phillips.

The governor's official car is a Cadillac, which Governor McKay thinks is a good car, too. He sells them, also. But his office had a worn-out Chevrolet to turn in on a new car. So it called for bids.

Phillips, who was finance manager of McKay's campaign, saw a chance to make the governor's office use a Ford. So he bid $498 on a 1949 Ford coupe. Phillips' bid, of course, was ridiculously low, and the state had to accept it. It also cost Phillips quite a piece of change to have his little joke.

The car is used mostly by the governor's assistants, although he drives it once in a while.

Ask Fair to Keep Ella Wilson

Retention of Mrs. Ella Wilson as secretary to the manager of the state fair and a general re-vamping of the entire state fair management under the department of agriculture is asked in a petition presented by Governor Douglas McKay by Henry Ahrens, Turner sheepman.

Ahrens presented the petition to the governor with the signatures of between 250 and 300 livestock exhibitors which were obtained during the close of the last state fair.

Mrs. Wilson, who has served as secretary, secretary to the board and manager of the fair for 35 years, announced that she would retire from state service January 1 after affairs of this year's fair had been concluded.

Some criticism was directed towards management of the fair this year by exhibitors and concessioners, the former raised by local implement dealers because of an increase in rentals for space and the latter because Ernest Gresham, a former advance man for a major attraction, had been placed in charge of selling space and who the petitioners charge will have the same work next year.

The fair has been managed since 1935 by Leo Spitzbart under the general direction of E. L. Peterson, state director of agriculture.

No Service

An aide said Denfield considered himself still chief of naval operations until he receives official notice of his removal from Navy Secretary Francis P. Matthews.

The aide said that Denfield's office had been advised that more than 1,500 telegrams—mostly from the midwest—already had arrived for the admiral.

Two chief petty officers acted as spokesmen for this morning's delegation. One of them said that they felt "very much involved" in Denfield's ouster and wanted to show him that they realized the sacrifice he was making in his fight for the navy.

Denfield, his voice faltering with emotion, told the men their demonstration was "the most wonderful thing that has happened to me in all my years in the navy."

He went on: "You'll understand I mean what I say because the title of which I am most proud is that I am known as a 'Sailor's Admiral.'"

Denfield's talk to the enlisted men was his second informal comment on his firing. He told another navy group last night that he is "sticking by my guns" but is reconciled to getting out if that will help the navy and the country.

Detroiters

"This is one of the most peculiar situations in history," he said, "where it is planned to vote for a city a large part of which will be flooded out in the next year and a half. It will mean with most of Detroit under water all the burdens of the city will be left on Idanha." Other speakers expressed approval of Girdod's attitude.

Justice Vickers, sponsor and sole supporter of the move at the meeting, answered by saying the only motive of juggling the lines on the new map was to give those opposing the plan because of fear of taxes opportunity to be left out and abide by their wishes as shown at their election. He said the community would be starting from scratch and there would be many beneficiaries.

fits a municipality could give it. Regardless of this hearing it was pointed out that it is mandatory the court take some action 15 days from October 27 and it was indicated if the petitioners are in order another election must be called, as provided by law, in not less than 30 and not more than 50 days. The court intimated it might give the whole 50 days if the election is called, this to avoid criticism about the voters being given insufficient time to register.

Negro's Charges

Wilson said he told the Alderman worker that the nearest town with a Negro area was Portland, and that when he was questioned further on how to get there, he told the Alderman where to find the bus station.

"At no time," Wilson emphasized, "did I tell him or any other person that Negroes were not tolerated here. I did not tell him to get out of town. But I did tell them to clear the streets in front of the tavern. Those are my orders and I addressed them to the entire group."

William Maxwell, Alderman paymaster, for whom the group was waiting at the time the alleged incident took place was due to bring farm witnesses before Charlton late Friday.

The Negroes supposedly involved in the case were said to have returned to Portland on Thursday, but the farm company was reported making an effort to locate the men.

Only three members of the Yale football squad weigh more than 200 pounds, and the heaviest man goes only 205.
