Henry J. Kaiser continues to be the "white haired boy" In getting taxpayers' money from the federal government under the Truman administration as he was under the Roosevelt regime when he seemed to have a back-door entrance, when denied the front door, and got what he was after. Two weeks or so ago he got a $34,400,000 loan from after. the Reconstruction Finance corporation to finance next year's auto production for the Kaiser-Frazier corporation. c Last week he applied for an additional $15,000,000 for the same purpose, and got it making a total of $44,400,000 to keep the enterprise afloat.

This $44,400,000 is only a small portion of the federal Joans made to Kaiser enterprises. So far he has got $192,- visitors go back 400,000 credit from the government. Of this the RFC also feeling for the has a loan of $88,000,000 on the Fontana steel plant.

As defined by an RFC commissioner, a Detroit banker, these Kaiser debts represent undertakings to put war-built plants to peace time use, and are backed by collateral and liens on property. The object of the loans is to create new production and payrolls. Incidentally probably to provide normal thing at competition against monopoly, at least in the aluminum field for RFC loans include $39,250,000 to the Reynolds Metals corporation.

As long as Kaiser can get federal money so handily, why does not the Salem Chamber of Commerce try and induce him to operate the Salem plant which can be made a very profitable enterprise for both himself and the community?

An Oregon Freedom Train?

Last year the colorful Freedom Train visited Salem as It did the other communities of the nation. The train brought to the people the historic documents of freedom and of great significance to the nation's progress. People who never would have had a chance to visit Washington, D.C., to see the documents in their usual resting places were given track-side views.

Now New York state has come forward with its Freedom Train. In this special Empire state exhibition are 89 documents illustrating New York's contribution to the growth and development of the basic liberties that com-formed by the internationally known Georges Bidault. He is the 50-year-old leader of the Popular Republican Movement, better known as the "MRP." Bidault was head of the wartime resistance in France and was provisional president premier from June to December, 1946. He also served a long time as foreign minister.

Bidault's cabinet, like that of his predecessors, is a coalition affair built from the center parties. There is in France a multi-plicity of political parties, and therein lies the weakness of Bidault's cabinet.

It will take only a moderate shifting of his support to throw the advantage to the opposition. That of course would be true of any similar government.
