Creamed Cauliflower

Ingredients: 1 medium-sized cauliflower (about 2 pounds with all outside greens), 1 cup boiling water, 1 1/2 tablespoons butter or margarine, 1 1/2 teaspoons flour, 1/2 teaspoon salt, dash of freshly ground pepper, 1 cup milk, paprika.

Method: Cut heaviest greens from cauliflower but leave as many as are fresh to cook with flowerets. Separate flowerets and cut heavy core or stalk in wedges, and medium-heavy greens in strips. Soak in salted water, if desired, for 15 to 30 minutes to draw out any insects; drain and put in a medium-sized saucepan with a tight-fitting cover, arranging core wedges and greens on bottom, flowerets on top. Add the water, cover and boil until just tender but still firm, about 8 to 20 minutes; test by piercing with a fork. Drain, reserving liquid—there should be about 1/2 cup; add cold water to make up this amount if necessary. Melt butter or margarine in a saucepan over low heat; remove from heat and add the flour, salt and pepper and blend well. Add the reserved cauliflower liquid and the milk gradually, stirring to keep smooth. Cook over moderate heat until thickened and bubbly; continue to cook for 2 minutes. Mix cauliflowerets and sauce and reheat. Sprinkle with paprika before serving. Makes 4 to 6 servings.
