

Reclamation Construction in 1949-50 to be $387,000,000

Salt Lake City, Utah, Nov. 4 (AP)—The reclamation bureau's construction program in the western states will approach $387,000,000 during this fiscal year, Reclamation Commissioner Michael W. Straus announced today.

Straus, who is attending the convention of the National Reclamation association, said expenditures in the 12 months ending June 30 will include $333,961,638 in new funds plus carryovers from past appropriations.

Work is going ahead on 63 projects and divisions, including the Missouri river basin development, which is being carried on as a single integrated project, Straus said.

They include 35 storage dams, nine power plants, more than 200 miles of canals, and other facilities for making water available for irrigation and domestic use.

Straus said that Congress in approving an "unprecedented" program this year had handed the reclamation bureau a "challenging responsibility."

which have long been in operation.

The total bureau appropriation for this fiscal year, including deficiency funds, has been $356,514,510, Straus stated.

He estimated the current construction program will make water available for an additional 400,000 acres and increase hydroelectric generating capacity by about 500,000 kilowatts by next June 30.

This would increase the total acreage for which reclamation project water is available to 5,750,000 acres and increase total installed generating capacity on projects to about 3,250,000 kilowatts.

Straus said this year's work will represent "major progress" on long range construction programs pointed toward new and supplemental water for another 4,000,000 acres and installation of approximately 2,000,000 kilowatts in additional power generating capacity by 1956.

"We have been moving dirt and pouring concrete in record volume ever since our programming conference in Boulder City last August," he said.

"Now, with the actual appropriation before us, we can pinpoint our goals. The reclamation forces throughout the country can have the ball and are heading for those objectives at full speed."

Coupled with actual construction, the commissioner explained, is a far-reaching program of investigations for future projects reaching into 17 western states.

Congress also approved $2,500,000 for project rehabilitation, permitting needed repairs and modernization on projects

Reapportionment Measure For Vote Filed With O'Hara

A preliminary initiative petition to reapportion the State Legislature on a population basis was filed with the Secretary of State late Thursday.

James T. Marr, executive secretary of the State Federation of Labor, came here to file it. He said it has the backing of the AFL, CIO, Young Republicans and Young Democrats.

If the sponsors get 25,482 signatures by next July 6, the measure would appear on the November, 1950, general election ballot.

The last legislative reapportionment was 40 years ago. Legislatures since then have failed to abide by the constitution, which requires reapportionment after every census. The chief demand for reapportionment comes from Multnomah county, which would benefit by a reapportionment.

Today's initiative would require the governor, secretary of state and state treasurer to do the reapportioning after each census. And if they don't, then the state supreme court would do it.

Under a reapportionment, Multnomah county would have a third of the legislators, but the initiative also provides that that county couldn't have more than one-third.

Multnomah county now has six senators, and shares another with Columbia and Clackamas counties. The initiative would give it 10 senators.

The same county has 13 representatives, plus one shared with Clackamas county. Under the initiative, it would have 20. The initiative would become a part of the state constitution.

School Girl Injured

Lafayette—Miss Betty Joslyn was injured when the car in which she and her sister Miss Donna Joslyn collided with the Lafayette grade school bus, driven by Elmer Holst, of Lafayette, a student of Linfield college, at the corner of 6th and Adams streets, here. The girls had just left their home to attend the Dayton Union high school. Miss Betty was taken to a McMinnville hospital and treated for cuts over both eyes and an injured knee.

Ice May Save Your Life

In the last five years ice has been found very effective in treating various injuries. First used in amputations, refrigeration treatment is now applied in cases of burns, frostbite, and advanced stages of cancer.

Ice or refrigeration as it is called reduces pain and swelling, arrests infection, and eliminates shock in operation. One of its greatest advantages is that it permits the postponement of an operation until the patient is physically able to safely undergo it.
