Humphrey Talks to Forum On State Institutions

One of the most dismal things among wards of Oregon state institutions and inmates of the penitentiary is the feeling that no one on the outside cares, Tom Humphrey, associate editor of the Oregon Journal told a large forum audience at First Congregational church Sunday night.

Humphrey, who has made a study of the institutions, spoke briefly and then turned the meeting into a question-and-answer session. The discussion, both adverse criticism and defense, was on the constructive side.

Humphrey stressed the theme that is the objective of the Sunday evening forum—interest of Christian citizens in public and social affairs.

Relative to the prison he said the physical plant has been much improved, but that the general situation is still not good and that improvements are needed in personnel and methods. Need of a prison physician and dentist and a full-time chaplain was stressed. Humphrey said that "one of the most abominable things are the solitary confinement cells where prisoners can be kept as long as a year, while in most prisons there is a 30-day limit."

He said the warden and the deputy warden avoid showing visitors the solitary confinement cells.

He cited the Brownlee case in which a prisoner died allegedly because of neglect after he had sloughed his wrists, and said he thought the recommendations of the state board of control, after investigation of the case, would be made public in a few days.

Another criticism of the prison was that there is no actual segregation of first offenders from old-timers.

Nearly all the state institutions were covered in Humphrey's comments and by those who asked questions. Among those participating were Mrs. Kathryn Loiza, superintendent of Hillcrest School for girls; Miss Eleanor Stephens, state librarian, who told of cooperation from the prison and other institutions in distribution of books; the Protestant chaplain of the prison, and many others.

Humphreys said that interested groups should visit the institutions often and that "all of us should be continually alert, that bad conditions be remedied."

Favor Musgrave For Council

It appeared Monday that Walter Musgrave, legislated out of office as mayor of West Salem by the merger of that city with Salem, would be the choice to represent the new Ward 8 on the city council.

The alderman will be chosen by the present seven members and Mayor Eifstrom Monday night, and immediately after the balloting the new member will take his place and sit the remainder of the meeting as a regular member.

According to West Salem together with officers of the two cities will meet at dinner at the West Salem City hall at 6 p.m. Then in a ceremony the charter of West Salem will be surrendered by Mayor Musgrave to Mayor Eifstrom, and an informal election of the new alderman will take place. His official election will take place after the council returns to Salem City hall.

Most Steel

Ching had called such a meeting last Thursday but Lewis failed to show up, claiming he was too busy getting the miners back into the pits after their 52-day strike. Ching angrily cancelled all further plans for mine meetings but it was reported that he was ready once again to make an attempt at a coal peace.

Less than 20,000 men were still on strike in the steel industry and most of those were expected to return to work in a matter of days.

The latest firm to make peace with the CIO Steelworkers was the Wheeling Steel Corp. which signed yesterday on the basis of the Bethlehem Steel Corp. agreement which set the pattern for the industry. Wheeling's 50,000 employees returned to work today.

First Playground Equipment Drama Offered by 20-30

By EILEEN SCOTT ROSS
"The Heiress," first of three Broadway plays comprising Salem's civic drama festival, played Saturday night to an audience that filled most of the Salem high school auditorium.

Sponsored by the 20-30 club, this enterprise is helping raise funds for a city playground equipment drive.

The cast of the Civic Drama Guild of New York, which presented the play here, is composed of Actors Equity players. The Victorian set was the main connecting link between "The Heiress," by Ruth and Augustus Squire, and "Washington Square," the novel by Henry James from which the play was adapted.

Elizabeth Lawrence handled the role of Catherine Sloper, the heiress who grows up in the course of the play's action. In contrast to the static characters who supported her, Miss Lawrence made the emotional development of the central figure convincing. She was notable, too, for her capable minimizing of the slapstick, and her gestures which changed from awkward to dignified as the action progressed.

As the stern father, Herbert Voland built up a tense mood of antagonism between himself and his daughter which aided Miss Lawrence in her interpretation. Catherine's fluttery aunt, Mrs. Lavinia Penniman, played by Justine Johnston, provided comedy relief, while another aunt was played by Claire Edmonds. Edmund Jordan was cast as Morris Townsend, Catherine's weak and mercenary suitor.

Continuing the series, 20-30 brings to Salem "Fair and Warmers" March 5 and "Peg o' My Heart," April 25.

Salem C of C

Brown is a native of Sand Point, Idaho, where he was born in 1903. He was for 24 years with the Union Oil company, and came to Salem as Willamette valley manager for the company in 1933, remaining until 1942. From 1942 to 1945 he was the company's manager in Spokane, and in the latter year resigned and returned to Salem to go into business for himself.

In accepting the office Brown paid tribute to Roy Harland for a year of accomplishment during the year. Harland announced that the old and the new boards would have a joint meeting Tuesday night, Nov. 22.
