Arlets shook her head. "Some-hing wrong some place," she mused. She rose now and went to the window to look out and to think of Allene Lane. Where and how sad the Lanes entered into this ind why were they more bitter fan anyone, even prior to the aunting accident?

Suddently she realized she was rery tired. The day had held too much.

"Tomorrow," she promised herself. Tomorrow she would do many hings: search the nursery, go into he city, visit the courthouse and kek—what had Row Kelly called 17—a transcript of the farmers lam suits. And that last one, the me the old attorney had handled, the one she'd been warned about set there be some reversal.

Morning brought radio reports of a breaking storm. Arleta went to the nursery.

Husbands Invited For Yuletide Party

Monmouth—The Martha Sunday school class of Evangelical church held its November meeting at the home of Mrs. Anna Herron with Mrs. J. H. Cady as sco-hostess. The husbands were sell, also, told of the First Bayentertained by Mr. Clyde Dickson at his home across the street. At the close of the evening refreshments were served to both groups.

The Marthas held a short business meeting and plans made for the annual bazaar to be held at Barney's store on December 10. A report was given on the venetian blinds that were recent-ly installed in the Martha room
