$1,599,931 Permit Issued

A building permit issued Friday at the office of the city building inspector for the new state highway office building was the biggest of the year. It calls for an expenditure on the project of $1,599,931.

The building will go up on the block bounded by Chemeketa, Center, North Capitol and North Summer streets. Sound Construction company is the contractor.

The building will have offices for the Oregon state highway department and also for the federal bureau of public roads.

Other permits: Ward C. Shryock, to build a one-story dwelling and garage at 2685 Doughton, $18,500. Madsen Wrecking company, to wreck a one-story dwelling at 1109 Union, $50. Madsen Wrecking company, to wreck a one-story dwelling at 1131 Union $50. Standard Stations, Inc., to wreck a service station at 2487 Fairgrounds, $50. Fred Woods, to alter a one-story dwelling 344 North 23rd, $250.

Taxi Drivers To Be Called

Resolutions will be introduced at the city council meeting Monday night calling upon all taxicab operating companies, and all drivers involved in the recent morals scandal in Salem to show cause why they should not lose their licenses. They will have to appear at the council meeting two weeks later.

Involved are the three companies operating in Salem, namely, the Yellow Cab company, Capitol Cab company, and Shorty's.

Individuals involved are only those drivers who were implicated in the recent cases. For all drivers, however, council legislation will enable city authorities to sift qualifications much more thoroughly than ever before when they apply for their license renewals at the first of the year.

General regulations much more severe than ever before will be provided.

Among ordinances to be introduced will be one for control of rates. It has been submitted by Dr. W. J. Stone, public health officer, and W. B. Quinn, sanitarian. Among other things it will provide for an amendment to the building code to require construction for elimination of rodents.

The regulation proposed is that set up by the United States public health service. Introduction of the bill coincides with arrival here this week of James C. Daniel, rodent control specialist from the government health service.

Christmas Garland To Adorn Streets

Starting at midnight Saturday night, workmen will put in the rest of the night and all day Sunday decorating Salem business streets with Christmas garlands, stars and lights.

The decorations are sponsored as usual by the Salem Retail Trade Bureau, and its president, Jim Beard said they would be more elaborate than ever before. Not only will materials already on hand be utilized, but new lighted bells and stars are being added.

The work will be done by Oscar D. Olson, florist, and Bishop Electric. The entire downtown business district will be covered as in the past years.

IN DAYS OF RETIREMENT

Prospective Pensioners Not Anxious to Sit Down and Rest

Washington, Nov. 26 (U.P.)—Most men dream of retiring at 60 or so to a life of carpet slippers, pipes and rocking chair and whistling for a small boy to bring another cool one while they watch the world roll by.

But pin the old boys DOWN and you get another story.

An insurance company in Minnesota recently pinned down 3,000 policy-holders and got some startling answers.

Question posed to the prospective retirees was:

"If you knew right now that you could be financially able to retire when you reach the age of 55 or 60, how would you expect to spend your retirement years?"

There apparently was much thought behind the answers. About one-third of those who answered the survey said they would keep on doing what they had been doing all along. Just as long as they were able. They'd start living off their retirement income only when their limbs and breath gave out and they no longer could keep up the pace.

Another 33 per cent of the policy-holders admitted they planned to use their retirement funds to ease off a little on more strenuous work of a more leisurely way of life—a chance to take more time for hobbies, religious and community work, study and self-improvement "and maybe to read the books I've been putting off reading all these years."

A lot of folks in this group would make a complete shift from their present occupations and take on something a little easier. Like a hobby that would bring in a little tobacco money. Perhaps a little light truck-farming, hog or chicken-raising or "fancy" livestock. Things they have thought about but never had time to get around to. Running a tourist camp cropped up frequently in the answers.

The rest of those who answered the queries said they thought it would be fun to have a sigh and give in to a Life of Riley.

Fish and hunt and turn most of the chores like gardening and woodcutting over to the roommate—or mama.

Most of these mentioned diversions like woodworking, photography, golf and rocking-chairing as ways to relax to keep from going completely stale.

Just about half of those who answered the survey, though, mentioned they would like to engage in some kind of public or community service. Like helping running the Boy Scouts, or the YMCA or a boys' club.

The urge to do something for others, in fact, was prominent in many of the replies. One banker said he would like to keep his hand in by doing "any civic work that promotes the golden rule." (One woman said she would be pleased to "help cripples and shut-ins.")

Members of the clergy were the least desirous of retiring. Most of them said they would not retire so long as they were physically able to stand up and preach the gospel. Only one clergyman out of five wanted to find complete leisure.

Oddly, older workers seemed more determined to keep their chins to the grindstones than younger ones. Only 28 per cent of those now under 40 wanted to continue work. Those over 40 have a different idea, apparently.

Maybe Walter Pitkin had something about life beginning at 40.

Attends Conference—Mrs. I. W. George, instructor at the Highland school, will return to Salem Monday from Washington, D.C., where Friday and Saturday she attended the national conference of classroom teachers. The Oregon delegate to the conference, Mrs. George, made the trip by plane, leaving Portland Wednesday. She was joined in the nation's capital for Thanksgiving by her sister, Mary Elizabeth Lovett, who is attending Columbia university.

Survives—Twelve-year-old Jannie Betty Henry lies in a Chester, Pa., hospital after she was found lying beside the dead body of her 11-year-old sister Elsie beneath a 100-foot high railroad trestle. The two girls were found Thanksgiving day, 17 hours after they were reported missing. Jannie said she heard her sister scream "when she fell through the trestle and when I ran to help her I fell through too." (AP Wirephoto)

Wash Machine For Polio Group

Members of Marion auxiliary, No. 661, Veterans of Foreign Wars, are to present a washing machine purchased for the Marion county chapter, Infantile Paralysis Foundation, Inc., preceding their meeting Monday evening.

The presentation will be made between 7 and 8 o'clock, the meeting to be in the VFW hall.

This machine is a special type to be used for hot packs in the treatment of infantile paralysis.

The regular meeting of the auxiliary will follow, the group to observe its 25th anniversary at that time. Mrs. Clara Tokstad, president of district No. 20 in the auxiliary, will be a guest to conduct annual inspection. The auxiliary meeting takes up at 8 p.m.

Woman's Club To Survey Free Libraries in County

By MARIAN LOWRY FISHER

A survey of facilities now offered by free libraries in Marion county will be undertaken by the Salem Woman's club, it was voted at the group's meeting Friday.

The club accepted the recommendation of the library division of its education committee to make such a survey. The great increase in population and the extensive developments in suburban areas have been so marked that the reading population is not served by regular libraries outside of Salem, it was pointed out.

The library division investigated the subject throughout the summer and in making its recommendation stated free library service is one of the major aids in education.

Joins Firm—Halbert Harvard, who this month came to Salem from San Jose, Calif., to take over the insurance department of Grabenhorst Bros. (Bishop Moderne photo.)

Major contracts in the rivers and harbors classification include construction of a breakwater and mooring basin at Depoe Bay; channel dredging in Olympia harbor, and levees and jetties at Grays Harbor and Chehalis river.

Civil works in Alaska are included in the schedule, total estimated cost to be approximately $1,500,000 with major work in the dredging of Wrangell Narrows.

Harvard, a native of Georgia but a resident of California for the past 25 years, had been in the insurance business for 20 years prior to coming to Salem. All of this time was spent in San Jose.

Prior to that, he was with General Motors and the Federal Motor company. He is a veteran of World War I.

In addition to being a past president of the San Jose Insurance Agents association and active in state and national insurance associations, Harvard belongs to the Blue Scottish Rite Shrine, Elks Lodge and American Legion.

Mrs. Harvard and the couple's son, Halbert Harvard, Jr., came to Salem with Harvard, and the family has taken up its residence on West Washington street.

Chief Aide

At the same time the department declared that any allegations that members of the consulate general staff in Mukden engaged in espionage are ridiculous and absolutely false.

Ward said he had not been able to find out whether the Mukden communists wanted Stokes as a witness, as a defendant or in some other capacity.

Stokes was "removed" from the consulate at 9:00 a.m. Saturday, Mukden time (8:00 p.m. Friday, Washington time).

Ward was refused permission to accompany Stokes "to the hearing," he informed the state department.

More than six hours later, the state department said, Ward reported that Stokes had not returned to the consulate and that he had been unable to obtain information of any kind on the "detention."

During the time that Ward and his other aides were being held incommunicado, the youthful vice consul Stokes was the man who got out fragmentary reports on what was going on.

State department officials said he is the number two diplomat at Mukden, Ward being number one.

His home town was given as Staten Island, New York. He is a graduate of Columbia university (1943) and Chicago university (1946), served in the army from 1943-1946 with the rank of captain and entered the foreign service in October 1946.

A little more than a month later he was sent to Mukden, his first foreign diplomatic post.

School Meeting Called—Improvement of facilities in the district will be discussed at a citizens' committee called for Tuesday night at 8 o'clock by the Rosedale grade school board. The meeting, to be held at the school, is open to all residents of the district. Subjects slated for discussion include proposed consolidation, construction of a new building or modernization of the present building.

Jean Donley Injured—Jean Donley, 21, of Mt. Angel, was treated for cuts in an Oregon City hospital after the automobile driven by her companion, Lee Clair Smith, 22, Estacada, crashed into an unoccupied parked police patrol car. The runaway automobile careened down nine blocks on 7th street hill after the brakes on his car failed to hold near the top of the hill. Smith told police, who filed a complaint charging him with operating a car without adequate brakes. The police car, a new model and driven about 6000 miles, was reported a total loss.

Uniforms Deductible—Police officers and highway patrolmen can now deduct the costs of their uniforms in figuring their federal income tax, according to Salem officials. A new ruling, recently announced by the internal revenue commissioner, broadens the deduction privileges for police officers whose uniforms, while distinctive, can also be worn off duty.

Polk Leaders Meet—A training meeting for Polk county 4-H club clothing leaders will be held at the Dallas city hall, December 1 from 10:30 to 3:30 o'clock.
