Nunes' rushes.

Lou Nunes, the squat gladi-ator with the clipped hair from southern California, whose an-tics indicated he has been introduced to professional wrestling, lost the 10 round main event to Dick Wolfe.

Wolfe, content to let his opponent wear himself down by his bull-like rushes across the arena, absorbed the left haymakers to the body with-out difficulty during the ear-ly rounds. One of these melees opened a slight cut over the Indian's right eye and started a trickle of blood from his

Slats considers the chief obstacle in the road to another championship lack of height among his available candidates. He makes a pretty good case for himself too as he contrasts his men against those of the opposition. However, in Ed Fleming and Bob Edwards, he has a pair of 6 foot, 6 inchers. New York, Dec. 1 (#)—The nation's top four football juggernauts — Notre Dame, Oklahoma, California and Armyappropriately enough gained six places on the 25th Associated Press All-America team.

Notre Dame, the No. I team by the widest of margins, dom-inates the 1949 team with three men. They are the Irish co-cap-tains, End Leon Hart and Tackle Jim Martin, and their rugged bull-necked fullback. Emil Coaches are notoriously pessimistic individuals and their doletul predictions customarily fall on unsympathetic fans. So when Slats Gill, Oregon State's top man in the basketball world, moans on an off the record basis that he can't see another northern division championship this season, few are inclined to take him seriously. Nevertheless, perhaps Slats knows whereof he is talking and time may bear him out. He's an expert basketball diagnostician and should be able to predict just the amount of progress a given individual will make toward perfection. Fred Cords, physical director at the "Y" who is familiar with "honor basketball" having contacted it in Kalamazoo, Mich., explains its operations. The players are responsible for calling fouls which they personally make. They do not call them on any of their own team mates or on the expression.

SUPERVISOR RULES

A person who is designated as "supervisor", either takes his place alongside the scorekeeper or timer, or occupies a position above the playing floor. The supervisor keeps a record of the fouls each player calls as well as those the supervisor believes should have been called. On jump balls, at the start of the game or the subsequent quarters or following a held ball, the supervisor designates one of the substitutes, usually the nearest one to the spot, to toss up the ball.

TROPHIES AWARDED

In league play where the honor system is used exclusively, the top trophy is awarded the team that has called the greater number of fouls. Smaller trophies go to the individual players who are high in this department. Lesser trophies go to the league winner and the runner up. Cords believes the system has great possibilities in the development of true sportsmanship and in the operation of basketball by and for the players. He points out that handball and volley ball are played without a ceting official and sees no reason why basketball ecting official and sees no reason why basketball shouldn't be operated in a similar manner.
