

Santa MAGICIAN AND THE

OUT CAME A SKINNY, DUSTY, ANGRY LOOKING DUCK

Chapter 2
Henry and Mr. Dilly Join Forces

Henry led Mr. Dilly to a very queer shed of a house at the edge of the town. It looked so rickety you would have thought even a spring breeze would send it tumbling to the ground. As they turned in at the gate a woman with fly-away hair opened the door and swept the porch vigorously.

"Is that your mother?" asked Mr. Dilly.

"Oh, no," said Henry. "I don't have a mother. That is Mrs. Snell. She takes care of me, I guess."

Just then Mrs. Snell caught sight of Henry.

"You! Where have you been? There's work to be done, you know. Get in here and scrub the kitchen and fill the wood box and peel the potatoes." Her voice was dreadfully loud and cross.

Henry said, "I went to a Christmas magic show and this is—"

"Christmas!" cried Mrs. Snell. "Just forget about Christmas. There won't be any Christmas in this house I can tell you—not for boys like you."

"Pardon me," said Mr. Dilly politely. "I am Mr. Dilly the Magician. Henry is bringing me to see his talking duck."

Mrs. Snell's mouth dropped open and she stared at Mr. Dilly unbelievably for a long moment. Then her voice flowed back into her mouth and she cried, "Surely a man as old as you has not been taken in by this foolish story of a talking duck."

Mr. Dilly looked at Henry as if to say, "Have you been fooling me?"

"It's not a story," blurted Henry. "It's true. Serena is in the back yard and she talks to the all the time."

Mrs. Snell burst into laughter. "Not only does the boy do no work, he is silly in the head besides. Why should I have so much trouble?"

"If I could see the duck, perhaps," suggested Mr. Dilly.

"Yes, come," said Henry quickly. "I keep her in a box out back."

But as he started to lead Mr. Dilly around the house Mrs. Snell whooped, "You won't find your duck out back now, young man!"

Henry stopped and looked at
