

Imprint of Death—The outline of the body of Wilma Van Orden, 24, who died in a fire at Kansas City, Mo., is imprinted on the living room floor of her apartment. Although the blaze was confined to the bedroom, soot and heat darkened the living room floor enough to leave the imprint after she collapsed on her back fleeing the blaze. Her death was attributed to suffocation. No one could explain why the living room wall bed was down. This picture was made shortly after firemen removed her body in an effort to revive her. District Fire Chief E. M. Grass said a cigarette apparently set fire to the bedding in the bedroom to start the blaze. (AP Wirephoto)

Artificial Insemination Grows Rapidly in County

By CLAUDE STEUSLOFF

Artificial insemination, next to television the fastest growing business in the nation, is now standard practice in 300 Marion county dairy herds, pointed out Elton Watts, president of the Marion County Dairy Breeders association at the fourth annual meeting in Silverton today.

A total of 2630 cows were inseminated with the excellent record of 69.8 percent conception on the first service. This compares with 2284 cows and 50.53 percent conception in 1947 and 2288 cows with 64.34 percent in 1948. W. L. Williams, technician, credits the increase to improvement in his technique and new methods of caring for the insemination material.

Another technician is to be put to work the middle of December so that new areas in Marion and Clackamas counties will have the service available. About 70 Clackamas dairymen are now members of the Marion association.

The Oregon Dairy Breeder's association, source of the insemination material, now has 17 Jersey, 14 Guernsey and 11 Holstein sires in its stud at Corvallis. Busiest bull is Oak Park's Pal, a Guernsey who will probably be the sire of more than 3000 calves before the year ends. Last year the favorite was Gwendolyn Dutch Prince, a Jersey who could claim paternity to slightly more than 900 calves.

Benton, Jackson, Josephine, Lane, Malheur, Marion, Union, Washington, Yamhill counties and a central Oregon organization are members of the Oregon association. During August the Oregon group inseminated a total of 1538 cows of which 70.7 percent conceived.

Paper Mill Executives Called To Discuss Pollution in River

Portland, Dec. 7 (AP)—Willamette Valley Pulp and Paper Mill executives have been asked by the Oregon sanitary authority to appear here Feb. 15 and discuss river pollution correctives.

Authority chairman Harold Wendel said yesterday the meeting was planned to bring to a head the state's plans to halt dumping of pulp and paper mill wastes into the river by Dec. 1, 1951.

State engineers are to submit evidence supporting the order the authority intends to issue against the industrial plants, Wendel said.

Letters to Cottage Grove, Philomath and Toledo demanding the appearance of city officials at the next authority meeting were authorized. Members said the towns must at that time submit financial and building plans for sewage disposal systems.

A pollution protest was received from a Clackamas county area signed by 57 property owners. It said the M & S Canning company and the Oregon Mushroom company were dumping wastes into Kellogg creek.

State engineers reported that the Oregon Forest Fiber Products company, Forest Grove, was permitting settling pond wastes to flow into Scoggins creek.

A Corvallis delegation headed by City Manager J. O. Conville complained of a sanitary order demanding the city treat its sewage. Conville asked why wastes from septic tanks on Corvallis fringe areas were not also under abatement order.

Wendel explained that the rural area situation would be taken up after major pollution sources, industries and municipalities, were controlled.

Cos Bay City Engineer R. H. Erichsen was told the city's plans for a $100,000 sewer system would not be approved until a treatment plant was included. The sewage would be dumped into the bay under the existing plan. Erichsen reported the money was not available for a treatment unit.
