WILLAMETTE UNIVERSITY

The holiday spirit is already in the air at Willamette, with many Christmas parties, dances, and general festivities scheduled for the coming week.

The four national sororities on campus have planned a "Holly Daze" formal dance at the Labor Temple tomorrow evening. This annual Panhellenic affair will center around an Old English Christmas setting, with Jean Gilmer of Chi Omega completing further decoration arrangements.

Holly and tints of red, silver and green will lend to the festive air, and the snowmen programs will no doubt add that certain something to the Yuletide scene. The Greeks have invited various student body officers, and the affair promises to be equally as enjoyable as in previous years.

Three Willamette students, Grace Ashford, Edith Fairham Gunnar and Bob Gwinn, have been honored by selection as soloists in the annual presentation of Handel's "Messiah," sponsored by the Salem Oratorio society, to be given Sunday afternoon at the Salem high auditorium. "The performance will include a large chorus and the university orchestra, both under the baton of Dean Melvin Geist. Each year, many Salem residents return to hear once again the work of this brilliant composer.

Santa Claus will be on hand Sunday evening to pass out candy canes to all Pi Beta Phi and their dates during the Christmas party at the chapter house. All will help make the ornaments of cranberries and popcorn which will be used to decorate the tree later on in the evening. The singing of Christmas carols and just general merrymaking will wind up the party.

Alpha Chi Omega has arranged its annual Christmas party with Salem alumnae for Tuesday evening at the chapter house, and at this time gifts to the house are presented. Dessert will be served. On Wednesday evening Alpha Chi have their party for active members.

Willamette's Art Gallery had its initial opening recently when the work of Dale Cleaver was shown. The exhibition room is in reality a converted wing of the art department in which various displays of senior art majors may be viewed throughout the year by students and Salem residents.

A large delegation of Young Republicans have planned to attend the state convention to be held in Oregon City this weekend. Chapters from major colleges and universities all over Oregon will meet to discuss new officers for the coming year and resolutions to be adopted. Convention plans include meetings, dances, and banquets.

Informal rushing for women began this last week with approximately 35 women signifying their interest in sorority living. A continuous schedule of dinners and "cokes" dates will finally culminate in formal pledging the first part of next semester.

AMONG those entertaining this week-end are Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Johnson, who are to be hosts for an informal party Saturday evening to honor Mrs. Johnson's father, David W. Eyre, on the occasion of his birthday. Friends have been invited to call between 5 and 7 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Chandler Brown and Mr. and Mrs. James Walton will assist the hosts.

Left-over rice may be made into an excellent dessert by folding into it stiffly beaten whipped cream, adding sweetened fresh fruit.
