

McKay Studies Conservation

A campaign to conserve Oregon's natural resources can succeed if the heads of various departments involved concentrate and co-operate in their efforts, Gov. Douglas McKay told a joint meeting of his advisory committee on conservation and the legislative interim committee on natural resources here Wednesday.

Gov. McKay said that the resources conservation problem in Oregon is one of the most important. He indicated he would favor a permanent conservation department. It would take legislative act to create such a department.

The governor suggested that personnel of this department probably would include several state department officials and others interested in conservation problems.

State Sen. Jack Lynch of Portland, chairman of the interim group, said he was interested in getting the reaction of the governor's advisory group before his committee proceeds.

Department officials at the meeting said they did not have enough information yet to make definite recommendations. They disclosed that they are consulting with other states to get conservation data.

State Forester George Spaur said information he has gathered so far indicates that conservation groups in some states have operated with great success. However, as far as his department is concerned, he said that forestry problems in Oregon are much different from those in eastern states.

Among other problems discussed at today's meeting were stream pollution, agriculture, education, recreation, hydroelectric, mineral activities and the work of the Willamette River Basin commission.

Tax Exemption Urged by CIO

Washington, Dec. 22 (AP)—The CIO urged congress today to give a $3,000 income tax exemption to married couples plus a $800 exemption for each dependent.

The proposal came from Hyman Bookbinder, economist for the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America speaking for the CIO.

Bookbinder told a senate economic committee the CIO also recommends raising the exemption to $1,500 for single persons.

The present exemption is $600 for each member of a family.

He argued that revenue losses to the government because of the increased exemption rate should be made up in higher corporate taxes or higher taxes in the upper brackets.

Bookbinder also urged:

1. Immediate action by congress to raise the minimum wage level from 75 cents an hour to $1 an hour.

2. Repeal of the Taft-Hartley act.

3. Enactment of a fair employment practices act designed to end job discrimination against negroes and other minority groups.
