

Olivia De Havilland Again Chosen Best Actress of Year

New York, Dec. 28 (AP)—Olivia De Havilland is the winner, for the second straight year, of the New York film critics' annual award for the best actress of the year.

Miss DeHavilland's performance in "The Heiress" won her this year's award. The critics picked her last year for her role in "Snake Pit."

The critics voted Broderick Crawford the best actor of the year for his role in "All the King's Men," which was voted the best picture of the year.

Two Britishers, Dame Edith Evans and Ralph Richardson, were runners-up for the best actress and best actor awards for their performances in "Dolwyn" and "The Fallen Idol."

Directing honors went to British director Carol Reed for "The Fallen Idol."

The critics voted "The Bicycle Thief," an Italian motion picture, directed by Vittorio de Sica, as the best foreign language film.

"Intruder in the Dust" was named the second best film of the year, and its director, Clarence Brown, was runner-up for best director.

"Devil in the Flesh," a French film, was voted the second best foreign movie.

The awards will be presented next month. They were voted by 17 motion picture critics.

Storm Warnings Posted

Seattle, Dec. 28 (AP)—The weather bureau today ordered storm warnings continued another 24 hours from 8 a.m. off the coast of Washington and Oregon from Tatoosh to Cape Blanco and in inland waters of Washington.

Small craft warnings were ordered for the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

10,000 in Honolulu Cheer Newlywed Gables on Arrival

Honolulu, Dec. 28 (AP)—A cheering crowd estimated at more than 10,000 persons jammed pier 11 Tuesday to welcome the honeymooning Clark Gables.

The crowd swarmed around the gangplank of the Matson liner Lurline as the movie star and his bride, Lady Sylvia Stanley, widow of Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., waved gaily to the mob and then drove off in a police-escorted convertible.

A six-man police motorcycle escort cleared the way as the greying 48-year-old bridegroom and his attractive blonde wife sped off to spend a vacation in the same rented home in the exclusive Kahala district where another movie star, James Stewart, enjoyed his honeymoon.

The Gables, who stunned the movie colony a week ago when they were married at a dude ranch near Solvang, Calif., appeared blissfully happy as they chatted with reporters before leaving the Lurline.

Asked what he received for Christmas, which the couple spent at sea, Gable threw his arms around his bride and said, "This . . . the best Christmas present a man could have."

The couple posed patiently and with evident good humor for hundreds of photographs on the boat deck as the liner slipped into the harbor. Both were bareheaded and the blond tresses of the actor's titled English bride waved in the early-morning tradewind.

Mrs. Gable wore a black and fuchsia print crepe dress with white sandals and a single strand of pearls. Gable was clad in a grey business suit.

They described their leisurely four-day voyage from San Francisco as "a most wonderful trip."

"Everyone aboard was simply wonderful to us," the bride said. "No one bothered us. They were all so sweet."

The Lurline's chef baked them a five-foot wedding cake Christmas day. That was the only time the dashing bridegroom and his petite wife, who resembles Gable's third wife, Carole Lombard, ate in the main dining room.

The couple also attended Christmas church services aboard ship.

Slim Hawaiian teen-agers swam alongside the ship and Gable emptied his pockets of coins, which the youths dived for in the clear blue water. When Gable ran out of change, he called for Sylvia's purse and tossed in all the coins she had in her handbag.

The couple made no effort to duck the crowds of shouting, waving men, women and bobbers.

By prearrangement, they were first off the ship, escorted by six motorcycle cops who boarded the ship outside of port.

Both had dozens of flower leis around their necks when the ship docked, but threw many of them to the crowd.

Gable laughed when a reporter asked him if he had any message for the world now, a question he ducked in San Francisco.

"Nothing the world doesn't know already," he replied.

"I'll say this, though," he added.

W. A. Patterson

Air Business Will Go Ahead

The nation's scheduled airlines should continue to enlarge their share of the first class inter-city travel market in 1950 and have even higher traffic volumes than in record breaking 1949, it was predicted today by W. A. Patterson, president of United Air Lines.

In a year-end review and forecast, Patterson said the increases can be expected despite what probably will be a continued decline in the first class travel market. He estimated that air travel will account for 48 1/2 per cent of this market in 1950 as against 43 1/2 per cent the past year.

In the case of his own company, Patterson sees a bright operating picture for the coming year. Continued improvements in regularity and dependability of schedules will do much to reduce seasonal fluctuation in air travel, he said.

This improved performance picture together with expansion of United's Mainliner fleet should enable the company to exceed the volume of an estimated 2,247,500 passengers which it carried in 1949, he added. Growing use of air parcel post should further increase air mail tonnage, he said, while air freight and air express also are expected to show substantial gains.

On almost all counts, 1949 was one of the most outstanding years in United Air Lines' 23-year history, according to the company's year-end review. While passenger traffic reached new highs, the company was able to operate with increased efficiency and economy and at the same time to achieve marked improvement in regularity and dependability of performance.

State Training School Frolics

Hubbard—The State Training School held almost a full week of pre-holiday activity for the boys beginning Tuesday evening when the Oregon City Rotary Club gave a party for the boys and brought the high school chorus, presented a stage show and gave treats to all.

Thursday evening a smoker with six visiting boxing clubs including The Pal club from Portland, the Milwaukie Boxing club, the American Legion Post No. 1 club of Portland, the Longview Boxing club, the Silverton Police club, the Mt. Angel Boxing club and the boys' own Boxing club. The public was invited to this and a very large crowd attended.

Friday night a turkey dinner with all the trimmings was held for the boys and the staff together followed with a movie.

Saturday was open house all day and the boys were allowed to take their parents for lunch at the cottages. At 1:30 they presented an hour and a half program for visitors. Then several of the boys were allowed to go home for the holidays. Cor-sages made by the boys were presented to all women visitors.

On Sunday a special Christmas religious service was held. The buildings were decorated with decorations all made by the boys including a sleigh, four reindeer and Santa placed atop one of the buildings and lighted at night.

Three Men Thought To Be Snowbound

Ellensburg, Wash., Dec. 28 (AP)—Three men, a miner and two would-be rescuers, were unreported today and believed snowbound at Big Bear mine, eight miles back in the Cascade mountains.

Rescue crews battled through four feet of snow in an unsuccessful attempt to reach the mine yesterday.

The missing men are Bill Lumsden, Jr.; his brother, Bob, and Oscar Johnson, a Roslyn prospector.

The trio was to have returned to Roslyn Friday, but none of the group has been seen since the brothers started into the mine last Wednesday to accompany Johnson out for the holidays.

Old Dog Collar Found—Sunday, Gordon setter, owned by former Gov. Oswald West before the turn of the century, whose collar bearing the inscription, "Sunday, No. 131, Oswald West" was found recently by a city crew cleaning the sewer lines. The collar was located in the pipe on Hickory street.

Os West Tells About Sunday, Best Bird Dog He Ever Owned

When city crews recently found the collar of "Sunday," a Gordon setter owned many years ago by a former Oregon governor, Oswald West, they brought back vivid memories to West of the dog that undoubtedly is remembered by a number of old timers.

West, who has been sent the collar bearing the inscription, "Sunday, No. 131, Oswald West," by A. J. (Tony) George, on learning that the collar had been found, immediately remembered "Sunday" as the "best hunting dog that ever showed up in Marion county."

Checking through old pictures West found a picture of the setter with information on her birthdate. This brought back other recollections of the dog included here:

"Sunday," my Gordon setter bitch, was born February 15, 1892. I bought her from Glenn and Carrol E. Hughes, who were then local agents for, I think, the New York Life.

"Hunters usually own many dogs in a lifetime, but never other, and when I was at work at Bush's bank she would find it a little lonesome at home and often would hit it for down town where she would pick up Orin's trail and follow it until she located him.

"Orin had sleeping quarters over the old 'White Corner'—now occupied by Lawyer Roy Hewitt. It was a stormy evening and Sunday was quite heavily with pup. Orin, not wishing to send her home in such a storm, took her, as he often did, up to his room.

"The next morning, smoking his over-sized pipe, he came in to the bank and informed me that Sunday was up in his room. I asked why he didn't send her home and his excuse was that she had pups the night before. "So I had to take time out from the bank to cart the dog mother and her offspring out to our home."
