Police Conduct First Bicycle Auction—Bicycles picked up by Salem police and held for 60 days without claim by owners were sold at auction this morning. Shown is Auctioneer Clyde Warren, chief of police, who had just sold a somewhat dismantled boneshaker for $3.25.

$111.50 Realized From Police Sale of Bicycles

There was no chanting, no sing-song whines, no typical auctioneer style of working up bids when more than a score of bicycles went up for sale Saturday at the City shops.

The auctioneer was none other than Police Chief Clyde A. Warren, who climbed atop a pecking crate in the chilly garage at 13th and Ferry streets to see that the sale went off on schedule.

A throng of some 75 men, women, boys and children tossed aside cares about snow and storm to jam the unheated building to bid on the unclaimed bicycles which police took into custody.

The auction was conducted under a new ordinance recently approved by the city council to permit the police to dispose of property which is found abandoned and not claimed during a period of 60 days.

Long before 10 a.m. when the sale was slated to start, the crowd began to congregate. At the deadline, Chief Warren outlined terms of the sale and immediately called for bids.

A conditional title by which the city promised to refund money should true owners be discovered for the property was issued to each purchaser. Each bicycle or part was sold separately, primarily to permit the youngsters in the crowd to get a chance at the equipment.

The first bicycle hoisted upon the chief's stand for sale was missing a rear wheel and numerous other parts.

The first bid was for a dollar. By steps of a quarter and fifty cents it climbed to $3, and the first sale was made at that point.

For approximately an hour, the bidding continued. Many of the group, obviously parents, held a dollar edge of the younger participants, but one youth caught the fancy of the chief.

For each usable bike, he followed the bidding to $5.50. He never been able to go beyond that, but his determination didn't wane through the sale.

The total collected by the city for the auctioned equipment was $111.50.

7 Puppies to Continue Diet

The seven Chesapeake retriever puppies owned by A. C. Friesen of route 5, Salem, will apparently continue to live on a diet of a special formula which uses syrup as its basis.

Mrs. Friesen said Saturday that four persons have brought would-be foster mothers for the puppies to the Friesen farm, but that none of the four mother dogs would allow the Friesen pups to nurse from them.

At least one other offer, that of the owners of a Dayton, O., dog, is still pending.

However, the Friesens think they will continue to feed their pups with the formula mix, since they seem to be thriving on it.

K & F Club Hears Harding Talk

Is America losing its risibility?

The answer is "no" by the response some 175 members of the Salem Knife and Fork club gave Ed Harding of Washington, N. C., Friday night at the Marion hotel.

The diners forgot all about world problems as they heard the humorist indulge in a story telling orgy of some 60 minutes. Starting off with sketches concerning the wives of the presidents of the United States, Harding worked his way into a chain of yarns that kept his audience roaring.

As the humorist admitted some of the stories were old but his manner of relating them made them brand new for most of those present.

The next meeting of the K and F club is scheduled for February 17 with Judge George W. Hardy of Shreveport, La., the guest speaker.

Storm Fatal

nearly five hours to make the last seven miles from Bellingham. The town had been cut off two days by the storm. The convoy included two bakery trucks, two fuel trucks, two milk trucks and radio-equipped state patrol cars.

Air traffic was grounded. Trains ran hours behind schedule. Buses cancelled many trips.

1000 Cars Marooned
Upwards of 1,000 cars were reported marooned in various parts of Washington and Oregon, but all occupants were reported to have made their way to safety.

Dozens of communities were isolated. Snowplows fought drifts up to 12 feet deep to break through to many of them needing emergency supplies.

The weather bureau at Seattle forecast continued extreme cold today—with no break in sight—moderating winds, light snow flurries and clearing.

The blizzard, caused by the merging of two storms, spread from British Columbia to northern California before sweeping eastward. As it raced across the Rockies last night, the Helena, Mont., weather bureau put out what it termed the "strongest warning it had ever issued."

Jobless Aid

Covered payrolls for the first three quarters of 1949 reached $704,603,936 compared with $716,201,241 a year ago for the same period.

Although covered employment dipped to 268,000 during last winter's prolonged cold spell, the average number of covered jobs during 1949 was expected to remain above 300,000.

With nearly as many more persons occupied in activities not covered by unemployment compensation law, Oregon's total labor force was expected to average nearly 600,000, about 50 percent above the pre-war figure of 1940.

Seasonal lay-offs during the final four months of the year increased unemployment from 36,000 to 69,000, but the changes were much less rapid than a year ago, when 72,000 were thrown out of work during the September-February decline.

For the first week in 1950, local offices reported 53,206 claimants as against 46,010, for the same week last year.

Dayton, Ohio—Mrs. O. E. Brest's dog, Rusty, has volunteered to mother the seven Chesapeake retriever pups in Salem, Ore., whose mother, Deep Water Lady, is physically unable to feed them, along with her own family of five youngsters. Mrs. Brest believes the idea quite feasible. (Acme Telephoto)

Snowfall

In Portland, downtown areas had but a thin blanket of snow while in other sections of the city in the northeast areas, drifts piled up to as high as six feet, and the weather bureau reported an official measurement of eight inches for the city.

To the east of Portland on the Columbia highway's upper regions, more than 100 cars and trucks were listed as stalled due to drifts.

Many sections of the Pacific highway, as well as the North and South Santiam highways and the Dallas-California highway were all reported closed by the snow.

Power Blackout
Most of Roseburg was without power from 1 p. m. Friday on. Heavy rains and wind brought on the blackout there, then snow came, nearly seven inches falling during the night there.

Corvallis was listed with 10 inches of snow this morning; Eugene with three to six inches; Grants Pass with three inches.

Eastern Oregon fared worse in the blizzard-like storms, below-zero temperatures being recorded in several sections, including Pendleton, which was recorded with 3 degrees below.

While there have been more severe storms in years past in Salem, also colder temperatures, the combination of the snow and cold, along with the severe wind, which in some peak gusts hit 80 miles an hour velocity, Friday, and the downpours of rain made it a stand-out storm for the records.

So far this January—up to 10:30 a. m. Saturday—a total of 11.4 inches of snow has been measured here. In January, 1943, a total of 22.1 inches was recorded, the heaviest fall at one time being the 10.8 inches measured on January 21 of that year.

Mothers Taken Home—Leaving for home with recently born infants are Mrs. Donald Largent and son, 660 Johnson, from the Salem General hospital and Mrs. Lloyd Thomas, Aumsville Rt. 1 Box 171, and son, from the Salem Memorial hospital.

HOLLY SAYS:

Well folks ordinarily I would suggest you come in and buy something, a watch or diamond ring or sterling silver or something like that but doggon I wouldn't advise anyone to come out in this kind of weather so, as cornie as it may seem, I am going to advise you to stay home where it's warm and cozy. I have to come down anyway to feed the cat and open the mail so tell you what I'll do. . . . If you want a gift for someone or something like that just pick up the phone and give me a ring. I'll select something nice for you and send it out—(cash on the barrel head of course—unless you're my mother). Oh, yes, the phone number is 35640. I'm not kiddin', keep your feet dry and your torso warm; I want to keep all my customers for a later day at a more convenient time.
