Cross Country Ski Winner Fails To Get Race Bid

Eugene, Ore., Jan. 19 (P)— Hans Holaas, winner of the national cross-country ski cham pionship at Tollgate, Ore., last winter, is puzzled. He hasn't winter, is puzzled. He hasn't been invited to defend his championship at the 1950 meet, The 26-year-old member of the Tri-Pass Ski club here said he had learned in a round-about way that the meet is to be held this Saturday in Berlin, N. H. But he hasn't heard it officially. Because of the scarcity of time he doubts now if he'll be able to make it.

Holaas said he had planned to enter with a teammate, Nils Norman. The pair recently won the northwest cross-country class A and B titles,

Coach Dims Lights To Prepare Team For Foreign Gyms

Collegeboro, Ga., Jan. 19 U.D.—Coach J. B. Scearce, Jr., took a dim view of his Georgia Teachers college team's marksmanship in road games. So today he decided to let the Teachers practice before each trip in a darkened gymnasium.

"We'll let in just enough light to see the backboards and our white jerseys," Scearce said. "We've got to do something to improve our performance in improperly performance in impro-lighted 'foreign gyms'."

Hitch Hiking Salmon Of Tumwater Falls

By JACK HEWINS

Olympia, Wash,-You'll have to stop insinuating that fish never learn, even if they do run in schools.

Our DesChutes river salmon might not like it. They're educated. It took five years, but they graduated cum laude.

Our salmon are so smart they even hitch a ride around Tum-water Falls in a tank truck.

The DesChutes was a salmon-less river until the Washington State Department of Fisheries set up its college of ichthyologic-al knowledge. The stream ram-bles down from the mountains into Puget Sound and tumbles over Tumwater just before it reaches the sea. Mighty leaper that he is, the salmon could nev-er hop over the Tumwater.

But every inch of salmon wat er is vitally important to the state of Washington. Bonneville dam slowed down the runs on the lower Columbia and Grand Coulee blocked them entirely halfway up the river. Now Mc-Nary is about to stick still an-other big concrete foot in the stream in eastern Oregon.

To preserve the runs, the department is forcing every down-stream river to handle all the salmon possible. The same is being done with the rivers feed-Run in Nestucca ing into Salty Puget Sound and the DesChutes was asked to do its share.

Starting in 1945, about 600, 000 young chinook salmon and 300,000 silvers have been plac-ed in the DesChutes. The can-didates for this class had to pass an entrance examination, too No salmon could enroll unless its folks came from a stream similar to the DesChutes in size, similar to the DesChutes in size, temperature, feeding conditions and distance of the spawning grounds from salt water. Eggs from fish native to the nearby Green river were coddled in hatcheries and the resulting in-fants released in the DesChutes. sure, is permitted occasional visitors these days. But

The salmon is a gadabout who spends most of his life in the cean and only comes home to raise a family. This year the fish from the first plant came bounce

The league has an open date January 24 and it is possible postponed games may be taken care of at that time.

Salem Fishermen

If one can manage to make it across the Coast range op-portunities for catching the limit in steelheads are excellent.

This is the report brought back from the Nestucca by several Salem anglers.

Water conditions in the Nestucca above Beaver were reported "just right." Motoring distance to Beaver is 64 miles and those making the trip reported no difficulty in making the trip.

Clarence Bishop and
