Presidential Mumps—Fellow students blame it on too vociferous campaigning. But whatever the reason, Wayne Hilliard of Santa Ana, Calif., felt a swelling in his head an hour after he had been elected president of the law school at Willamette university Wednesday. An examination revealed that Hilliard was suffering from the mumps which may cause him to conveniently miss final exams for the first semester next week. Then, too, his associates are checking on their own vulnerability to the gland swelling disease.

Leslie Schools' Political Fight

Leslie junior high school's annual mid-year elections now have the school's hall vamped with political posters stating each candidate's slogans or mottoes, telling why they should hold an ASB office in the school. The final elections are slated for Monday morning following the political speeches by the candidates.

Coming out of the primary elections with the heavy side of the vote for the office of vice-president was Barbara Anderson and Diane Burkland. Bill Ringnald was defeated. For the office of secretary Barbara Franzwa topped all competitors and Arlyss Zeeb was second for that office. Eliminated from running were Shirley Harp and Beverly Roy.

George Matter received the most votes for the office of treasurer via the high publicity of his slogan "Let George Do It." Jean Jorgenson was a close second in the voting department. Eliminated were Sidney Kromer and Sylvia Lottick.

For the office of song queen Claudia Waters won most of the votes over her competitors, and Phyllis Shrake placed second over Laurel Herr.

The office of sergeant-at-arms Bob Clark and Pat Largent are finalists over Richard Morris and Curtis Adstitt. In view of the fact that Don Agnew and Tom Hunt were the only candidates for the office of president and that Dean Read and David Hunt were the only politicians running for the office of yell king these four candidates did not enter the primary elections but their names will be on the final election ballot.

Final elections are slated to take place Monday morning during home room period.

Ferry Crash To Bring Suit

Marion county will be the plaintiff in a law suit against the owner and driver, or both, of a truck which was involved in an accident with the Wheatland ferry on November 1, 1949.

The truck, owned by E. J. Casey of Independence and operated by an unidentified man, attempted to drive onto the ferry as the boat was pulling away from the slip of the Yamhill county side of the river.

The truck's front wheels caught on the ferry, causing $361.09 damage to the apron of the ferry.

The county court was notified by letter Thursday that the owner and driver of the truck are in the opinion that the accident was caused by negligence on the part of Marion county, operator of the ferry.

It is the opinion of the county court that the truck driver was at fault, so the court ordered District Attorney E. A. Stadler to enter court action against the truck driver or owner, or both.

Byers Kidnap Story Probed

A story of a kidnap-holdup told by James E. Byers of 1715 North 20th street, was under investigation Thursday by Salem detectives.

Byers told officers that he had been drinking beer in the Fairgrounds tavern Wednesday night when two men offered to give him a ride to another drinking spot.

When he accepted the offer and the trip started, Byers charged that one of the men "stuck something in his ribs." He was taken outside the city limits along Silverton road, ordered out of the car and told to strip.

When the men thumbed through his wallet and found only three or four dollars, they told him to dress and take them somewhere where he could get them some additional cash.

Byers related that he promised to borrow some money for them at Carr's tavern, but when the trio arrived there, the establishment was closed.

He told police that he led the two men to believe that he could secure additional money for them at his home and that they drove him there.

Then, he explained, the two men sped off in their car the moment he stepped out.

He has contributed to the growth of the industry in this area and has a wide acquaintance among the shippers and merchants. Flood Threat

On the basis of that warning and because of backwater rolling through openings near the south end of the front-line levees, about 9,000 residents of the floodway lands have fled their homes.

Refugees Transported
Carried out by trucks, boats and amphibious army ducks, the refugees have streamed through this small Missouri city and the nearby town of East Prairie since Monday.

Almost a 1,000 have been quartered in abandoned army barracks at Malden, Mo. The others have found housing with friends and relatives and in tents issued by the Red Cross. The Red Cross, however, has ceased issuing tents at the request of the Missouri health department.

The Red Cross has urged the tented refugees to go to Malden in busses provided for them. Chapters and army posts in the south and midwest have sent huge food and bedding supplies into Malden. The center there is equipped to handle 5,000 refugees.

While the army engineer's statement at Memphis indicated the Cairo district flood threat was easing, the engineers are ready for an emergency. They moved bulldozers and other equipment onto the levees near here yesterday. This equipment will be used to flood the spillway should the river surge above the anticipated crest.

Dynamiting

President John P. Busarello of the United Mine Workers' district five wouldn't hazard a guess on whether his staff could get the striking miners back at work Monday. He declared:

"We union leaders simply have to get across to the miners in our lectures that Mr. Lewis' suggestion that they return to work amounts to an order."

Last week, Lewis suggested the 69,000 diggers on an unexplained strike go back to work. Instead, most of them continued the walkout. The few who did return were replaced by other thousands. Then some more joined in. By the time the juggling was over, 90,000 miners were on strike.

Unpredictable John L. hasn't given any further suggestions, Busarello declared. The Pittsburgh man added:

"We don't need any further word. We're going to try and get the men back to work on the three-day week ordered by Mr. Lewis."

Busarello's statement came only a few hours after the government launched a move toward getting coal mined on a five-day week basis. And it came amid reports of mounting fuel and power shortages.

Weather

Several awnings fell under the weight of ice, among them the one at Jim's Shoe shop on High street. Most marquees were reinforced by bracing them from the sidewalks. At Olson's Flower shop at Court and High a window was broken by the collapse of an awning.

Some public and organization meetings cancelled yesterday were again being scheduled today, but the Chamber of Commerce board of directors postponed its meeting Wednesday night for a week.

Birds were having a rugged time and householders were urged to toss out a little food for their feathered friends. Warm pans of drinking water were also advised for the birds.

Early Thursday the main inconvenience and hazard for pedestrians was the glaze of ice on the snow or on walks from which snow had been removed. Later it was slush and water in the gutters.

For two days city trucks have been hauling snow from the streets and dumping it into Mill creek.

At Salem Boathouse a sealing bureau was about to fall into the river, evidently because of pontoons breaking beneath it, which may or may not have been caused by the weather.

Meet Monday Night—Company G, 162nd Infantry regiment, Oregon National Guard has postponed its meeting until the night of Monday, January 23. At that time the regimental physician will be in Salem to give physical check-ups to men of both company G and company B.

Storm Cancels UAL Airflights

Salem still was not having any United Air Lines flights Thursday.

According to latest word received at the Salem station there would not be any flights north of San Francisco or west of Salt Lake City Thursday.

Flights into Portland have been cancelled because of freezing rain and the southbound flight slated to leave Portland at 6:05 p.m. and all east bound evening flights have been cancelled.

At McNary field the ice and snow on that part already cleared had turned to slush and men were still working on the other runway to clear it of snow and ice.

Silver Thaw

The new blast of winter was started off with an awesome fall of mixed sleet and freezing rain late Wednesday afternoon, the little 'hard frozen' pellets' combination measuring an inch to cover the snow already on the ground. The freeze then set in to crust over the whole mixture.

At the time the heaviest storm was in progress the mercury dropped to 22 degrees.

Rain early Thursday morning, quickly freezing, brought on the dangerous ice conditions.

The Thursday morning minimum here was 28 degrees, the same recording as the maximum for Wednesday.

No river reading was taken in Salem this morning, ice and snow blocking the steel door to the place where the gauge is.

The next big worry in the valley is the run off following thawing and melting of the quantities of snow in the foothills and through the valley when the rain comes, considerable surface water and rising streams to result.

Silver Thaw Widespread

Most of western Oregon from Eugene to north was hit with the same freezing rain that struck Salem areas.

Schools in Portland and in many other sections as well as in Salem were closed, Salem's not to open again until Monday.

In the Cascades east of Eugene on the Willamette highway buses, cars and trucks were stalled by the Wednesday storms.

In southern Oregon, however warmer temperatures were thawing the snow, causing streams in that area to come up rapidly, including the Rogue river.

Sled Theft Reported—Bruce Spaulding, 219 W. Lincoln, reported to Salem police that a small sled had been stolen from his property.

March of Dimes Campaign to Move as Weather Improves

Boostered by the unqualified endorsement of Governor Douglas McKay, the 1950 March of Dimes campaign in Marion county will go forward with considerable impetus when weather conditions are a bit more favorable.

The talent show scheduled for early this week but postponed on account of adverse weather, is slated to be produced at the high school next Monday and Tuesday nights at 8 o'clock. Bill DeSouza and his Crystal Garden orchestra musicians will contribute music for the shows.

Enthusiasm over the drive "has never been quite so great," according to Oregon's veteran March of Dimes chairman, Dr. E. T. Hedlund of Portland, who predicted Thursday that this year's polio fund-raising effort in the state "will be the best ever."

Dr. Hedlund's optimistic announcement followed on the heels of a statement by Governor McKay in which the state's executive said that "four consecutive epidemic years have decreased funds for the infantile paralysis fight to a critical low."

Dr. Hedlund reported that all leading civic and fraternal groups in the nation have gotten behind this year's drive in Salem, special plans for the American Legion's cooperation were announced by Dave Hoss, chairman of the state department's community services committee. Hoss said he had written all posts in the state urging that they supplement standard child welfare programs with auctions, parties, dances and similar activities.

Courthouse

The new courthouse will contain over three times as much floor space as the old county edifice. The new building will have about 104,000 square feet; the present building has but 32,000.

A few minor changes must still be made in the building's interior. They include the arrangement of some of the offices, vaults, rest rooms, etc. When Bellusch completes these alterations, he will return to Salem for a meeting with the commission. Once the entire set of plans is awarded approval, he will start making up the actual blueprints.

The county will probably open bids for the courthouse as soon as blueprints are available. Another move taken by the courthouse commission Wednesday was the adding of $80,000 to the previous cost limit of the courthouse.

The extra amount was the estimated cost of adding two wings extending out from the front of the building on either side. The addition of these wings was recommended by the commission in their earlier meeting with Bellusch this month.

The $80,000 allotted Wednesday brought the financial outlay for the new courthouse to about $1,580,000. Of this amount, $1,350,000 will be readily available by the time the building is completed.

Any amount over and above $1,350,000 would have to be raised through additional tax levy, county sale of timber land, etc. Money has been going into a courthouse fund for the last 10 years. There was $339,000 actually in the fund on January 4, 1950, not figuring money which had already been collected by the treasurer and not yet placed in the fund.

During the process of tearing down the old building and putting up the new, offices now housed in the courthouse will be moved, for the greater part, to the school administration building.

The county officers will occupy the space now held by state offices there. The state offices will move out of the school administration building when the new Public Service building is ready for occupancy.

One of the major problems involved in the temporary shifting of offices will be the handling of prisoners in the county jail. They will probably have to be spread out to other county jails in Albany, Dallas and Oregon City.

Crosby Admits Crooning Son Did 'Pretty Darned Good Job'

Hollywood, Jan. 19 (AP)—Bing Crosby said today his oldest son, Gary, must wait at least six years before following in the old crooner's footsteps as a radio crooner.

Gary, 16, made his debut last night on his father's Chesterfield hour radio show over CBS. And his father, who was in San Francisco, had to admit that the kid did "a pretty darned good job."

Other crooners admitted that Gary's youthful, clear voice sounded just like his old man's did 20 years ago and that they were worried about the competition.

"A Crosby without hair was bad enough," Frank Sinatra moaned. "Now look what we got."

Gary got off to a good start when a Washington radio executive offered him a job "whenever he is willing."

General Manager Howard Stanley of station WEAM waited only long enough to hear the youth warble "Dear Hearts and Gentle People" before he offered him a singing disc jockey spot.

But Gary still has two years at San Jose prep school, near San Francisco, then four years of college before him, Crosby said.
