Attlee's Labor Party Promises Nationalization of Industries

London, Jan. 19 (AP)—Prime Minister Attlee's labor party today promised to keep Britain on its socialist course with new nationalization of industry and continued rationing and price controls—if laborites retain power in the Feb. 23 elections.

The pledges were made in a 6,000-word manifesto containing the campaign platform of the Socialist-minded labor party.

Principal aim of the labor program, said the manifesto, was full employment.

The policy declaration sharply rapped Winston Churchill's Conservative party, which is bidding for reinstatement on the promise of steering the country out of Socialist waters back to free enterprise.

The laborites said their fight was directly against the Conservatives and against the "unemployment, strife and economic confusion which would inevitably result from the Conservative wish to 'let things rip.'"

Thus the party in power had fired the opening big gun in what promises to be one of the most crucial political battles in recent British history.

The Conservatives' big blast is expected next week with the issuance of a similar policy manifesto. Churchill and his "shadow cabinet"—which would become the real cabinet if the Tories win—met at his London house yesterday to polish it up.

Conservative reaction to the labor manifesto was typified by Lord Rothermere's London Daily Mail, which called it a "blank check on nationalization."

The laborites have promised to continue their Socialist program, already well on its way with nationalization of major industries in the five postwar years of Labor rule.

To consolidate state ownership and round out the picture of Socialist aims, the party now promises to take over the cement industry, sugar refining, water works, meat slaughtering, and cold storage plants. It also said it would keep an eye on certain portions of the chemical industry and take them over if it were in the national interest to do so.

The manifesto, titled "Let Us Win Through Together" followed closely a policy statement called "Labor believes in Britain" issued last April before the Labor party's annual conference.

One exception was its promises on industrial insurance, which last spring the Laborites had marked for state control. The manifesto proposes to "mutualize" such insurance companies, putting them under ownership of policy-holders.

Girl Groups Interest Parents and Teachers
Lyons—The Mari-Lynn PTA met at the Rebekah hall with a fair crowd, considering the weather. The sixth grade mothers were hostesses for the evening. Some discussion was held on sponsoring either the Girl Scouts or Camp Fire Girls group. Following the business meeting Paul Ackerman, from the public relations office of Portland, gave an interesting talk. His two boys who were with him furnished piano and clarinet music. Refreshments were served at the close of the evening.
