Take a look."

Hank looked at the card, On the side reserved for the message was written: "Corliss, dear, this shows where I am living. It's the wildest, most inaccessible place you can imagine. I still feel the results of that auto accident six weeks ago, but what with climbling around these mountains, living on venison and trout, getting lots of fresh air and exercise, I'll be fit in no time at all."

Hank turned the card over an attudied the photograph of a mountain cabin, with a man standing in front of it smilling fatuously at the camera, "Auto accident?" Hank sked.

"According to Ed Harvel, that accident what he looked like?"

"Remember what he looked like?"

"Well, now, that's interesting Probably along about last September?"

"That's the fuel week of the card of the sheriff."

"Hey, wait a minute," Hank said. "If he sent his wife a picture population in the sheriff wanders of the post card and sent it to the old address where a he lived when he was courting her."

"Hank didn't say anything, the sheriff and has been marked three years, but he addressed the post card and sent it to the old address where as lived when he was courting her."

tain cabin, with a man standing in front of it smilling fatuously at the earners, "Auto accident?" Hank saked.

"According to Ed Harvel, that accident was three years ago. The date on the eard shows it was sent about six weeks after the guy disappeared the second time. Apparently he got his head banged in that accident, and whenever his memory slips a cog, it goes back to the time of that accident."

"A trapper's cabin," he said, "up on a ridge. It was built in the fall. You can see where the trees were ehopped off around near the cabin—indicates there was about three feet of snow on the ground. The guy's sure a tenderfoot."

"He is, for a fact," the sheriff agreed.

"Those high boots," Hank went on, "Hobails in 'em too. Bet they on a ridge, was built by someone who had a line of traps, was started in spread. The ground and finished after the fall before there was any snow on the ground, and finished after the fall before there was any snow on the ground and then higher up. And those last saplings that stick out over the door to hang traps and stuff on were cut off five feet above the ground at this time that stick out over the door to hang traps and stuff on were cut off five feet above the ground at this different part of the ground and then higher up. And those last saplings that stick out over the door to hang traps and stuff on were cut off five feet above the ground and then higher up. And those last saplings that stick out over the door to hang traps and stuff on were cut off five feet above the ground and then higher up. And those last saplings that stick out over the door to hang traps and stuff on were cut off five feet above the ground. The stumps are right near the cabin."

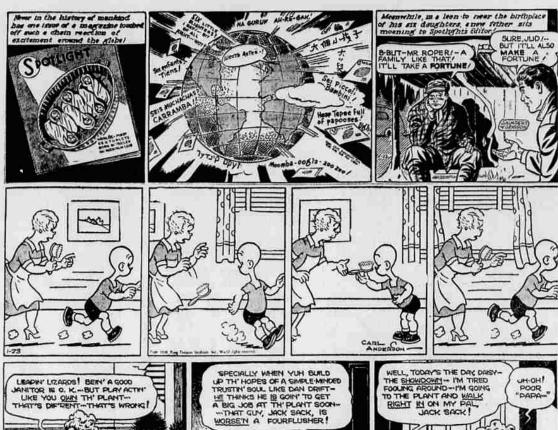

"Bill Catlin grinned at him." I wouldn't say anything like that to this detective that's coming out.

"Why not?"
"Well, now," the sheriff said ocoth-search is to go on into the Middle for the sheriff said sooth-search is to go on into the Middle for the sheriff said sooth-search is to go on into the Middle for the sheriff.
