Polk Dairymen Gather Friday

Dallas — Dairymen in Polk county interested in artificial insemination will have an opportunity to sign up for this service in the Dallas city hall Friday afternoon.

This will be a cooperative. All dairymen interested in getting the service should attend this sign-up meeting. Twelve hundred cows are needed in order to hire a full time technician in Polk county.

Cost to the dairyman varies in the different counties, however, basically they will be as follows:

Membership fee is $10 for each breeder regardless of the number of cows in the herd.

Capital stock certificate $5. This is paid only once for each cow of her replacement.

Breeding fee $7. This is paid for each cow each year. You are entitled to three services if necessary. Additional services are $3 each.

The $5 for each capital stock certificate is used for capital investment such as purchase of bulls and equipment and represents an investment in the association.

The $7 service deposit pays the operating expenses of the association and any surplus after expenses are paid and reserves are set aside is to be returned to the members. Four dollars of this stays with the local unit and $3 goes to the central to pay its expenses.

For ten cows it would cost $10 membership, $50 for capital certificates and $70 for breeding fees. That is a total cost of $120. The second year the cost would be $70.

Some of the top bulls in the state are being used by this association. Their service is available at less than the price of feeding the present bull.

America's Potential in Next Hundred Years Held Rosy

Prophets of doom and Americans despairing of the future will find some compelling reasons for altering their views in an article by Dr. Harold B. Moulton, president of Brookings Foundation, in the February American magazine.

America's potential achievements in the next hundred years are rosy indeed, says Dr. Moulton, who adds that "the unfilled desires of the great bulk of the American population provide the essential foundation for almost limitless economic expansion."

While making it clear in his article that he is "depicting the kind of life we can have, not what we necessarily will have," the noted economist declares:

"Our resources in sight are abundant enough to permit us to double our population in the next 100 years—and at a plane of living eight times as high as we know today."

"We can achieve this kind of future, however, only if our nation adheres to wise policies. Our nation must show greater care in conserving our remaining natural resources . . . we must take advantage of every scientific and technological advance to increase our productivity . . . we must encourage, rather than snipe at, large-scale businesses . . . we must get the U.S. on a sounder financial basis . . . we must increase the spending power of the average American as fast as expanding productivity permits . . . and, most important of all, we must protect and promote free enterprise in America."

Such things as plastic yachts, personal planes, power from the sun, far greater abundance in food homes, clothes, health and education can be ours if our way of life and the free enterprise system from which it stems is preserved, says Dr. Moulton. Thorough study has convinced those at Brookings Institution, Dr.

Moulton explains, that our resources should permit us—in the coming century—to expand our spending in this manner:

1. Shelter and home maintenance—about 16 times.

2. Attire and personal care—about 20 times.

3. Health and education—about 30 times.

4. Recreation and travel—about 33 times.

Furthermore, he reports, a study of communism, state socialism, free enterprise, and hybrid types where the latter operates under the overhead control of government leads to this conclusion:

"The only economic system sufficiently dynamic in character to assure us of enjoying a century of abundance is free enterprise, modified by government regulations designed to establish 'rules of the game', but not to take over the role of management."

Morse Asks Justice Instead of H-Bombs

Madison, Wis., Feb. 8 (AP)—Sen. Wayne Morse, R., Ore., has called for a three-point program to save world peace lest mankind lose its "happiness for generations to come."

A University of Wisconsin alumnus, Morse told a Founders' Day banquet Monday night that the bi-partisan foreign policy should be revived, that freedom-loving peoples should unite in a peace front, and that they should set up a world order "capable of substituting international judicial decrees for hydrogen bombs."

"We must demonstrate that we stand ready to join with Russia and other nations in an effective plan for international control of the manufacture of atomic and hydrogen bombs," he said.

Morse said a "little group" in the Republican party was bent on wrecking U. S. bipartisan foreign policy.

"I'd like to tell that little group in the Republican party seeking to destroy bipartisan foreign policy that there are republicans who will take them on if they try to play politics with the peace of the world," he said.

Commies Get Distorted View Of Life in U. S. at Youth Festival

The American delegation to the World Youth and Student Festival in Hungary pictured the United States to the other delegates as a place where most young people "have no jobs at all, and walk the streets in search of employment," according to an article in the current issue of The Saturday Evening Post.

In an article entitled "How Our Commies Defame America Abroad," Vic Reinemer, a Montana University graduate, gives a detailed factual report on the distorted picture of the United States presented by the American delegation to the 10,000 other delegates from all over the world.

Reinemer was a member of a small minority group in the delegation which attempted unsuccessfully to have the truth told about conditions in the United States.

Reinemer reports that a brochure, printed in four languages and distributed to other delegates at a cultural presentation by the American delegation, said in its introduction:

"In a time of developing economic crisis, the few of us lucky enough to land jobs face declining wages, insecure seniority, speed-up and campaigns of terror and sabotage against our unions. But the greater part of our young people have no jobs at all, and walk the streets in search of employment."

"Many of us are former servicemen, our meager veterans' allotments exhausted, our post-war dreams of full employment smashed. To the ever louder demand of our youth for jobs, all Wall Street can answer is 'Join the Army.'"

At the Festival Exhibition Hall, Reinemer writes, the American display featured a picture of the Statue of Liberty behind bars.

"Another," he continues, "showed a hooded figure hanging a Negro. Photographs of slums represented American housing. Well, like most Americans, I'm not very proud of slums or of the Ku Klux Klan, and I'm not surprised when communists play them up."

"But I was surprised to see these things presented by the American delegation as typical of our country. A number of us felt that our display should show something more positive about the United States as well as these blemishes. But we didn't get to first base with that idea."

Reinemer says "things were different at the Soviet pavilion," adding: "The pictures there were bright, modern day nurseries, beautiful school buildings, hospitals and resorts."

The "obvious distortion" in the picture of the United States conditions was "almost funny," Reinemer comments until he realized that to many people "this was simply confirmation of what they had been told."

He continues: "After all, we were Americans, representing our country. Certainly they could take our word for it. When I realized that, it no longer seemed funny at all."

Reporting on the makeup of the 200-member American delegation, Reinemer says they were about equally divided between girls and boys, whose average age was twenty-two.

"Half a dozen were Negroes," he says. Ninety-five were students, thirty trade-unionists, and the others for the most part representatives of various organizations — forty from Young

What Constitutes Tramp?

Philadelphia, Feb. 8 (AP)—Judge Charles L. Guerin of quarter sessions court was confronted with two pretty good questions yesterday: What is the definition of a tramp and is it illegal to be one?

Those posers were raised when Benjamin Cokley, 23, was brought before the jurist on charges of being a tramp.

Assistant District Attorney Raymond A. Speiser consulted the Pennsylvania penal code and came up with a quotation from section 617:

"Whoever goes from place to place begging or subsisting on charity, who has no fixed place of residence or legal occupation in the city or county where arrested, shall be deemed guilty of being a tramp and therefore guilty of a misdemeanor."

That, Speiser said, seemed to make Cokley a tramp under the law. Judge Guerin concurred but gave Cokley a suspended sentence with the understanding he would return to South Carolina, where he originally lived.
