In which Life Evans dreams of December 1 and the might before the audden size of the Life Evans was just as well satisfied him an excess not to work, even left he could be mending harness of the could be made to the could be made t rifles close to hand, probably talking shout Oregon while they waited for the start.

Two men were standing in front of Hitchcock's store, talking earnest. One was Tadlock the Illinois man who had come to Independence early to talk Oregon and didn't want to Join any company already being formed but to set up his own. Tadlock was full of business all the time.

The other man was spindly-looking and had a crop of whiskers that seemed to have moited some. He just kept bobbing his head to Tadlock, as if to say yes to everything. Evans pulled the mule over to a post and got off, feeling a little stiff in the knees, and tied up. He walked over to the two men.

"This is Henry McBee," Tadlock and "Life Evans."

"Where you from, McBee?" Evans seeked.

"Southern Ohio, Cincinnati, you (Copyright 1989)

"Southern Ohio, Cincinnati, you might say."
"He's a man who knows his mind,"
Tadlock put in.

Tadlock put in.

Evans and McBee went into the store. Hitcheook had his hands on the counter, waiting for trade.
