Cows Regular in Habits, Object to Daylight Saving

Cows keep regular hours and have regular habits. They get up mornings, have their meals, and submit to being milked at the same hours day by day. So cows have no use for daylight saving. And their owners don't either. The Oregon Farmers Union mentioned these things in a letter to the city council Monday night among all the other inconveniences that daylight saving causes the agricultural industry. It just doesn't fit into the agricultural scheme, they said.

The letter was sent to the Portland city administration as well as to Salem. Alderman Howard Maple thought the letter should be referred to Alderman Albert Gille with instructions to make a study of the dairy industry. It was Gille who introduced the daylight saving ordinance last year. Mayor Elfstrom and the council said that since daylight saving isn't going to be an issue for some months yet the letter should simply be filed for future reference. That was done.

Material for Census Arrives

Material to be used by census enumerators in this district has arrived in the city in 49 large crates and will be delivered at the census office, 1020 Market street, at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning. The material is the portfolios that the enumerators will carry. The shipment weighs 3552 pounds, and Cornelius Bateson, supervisor of the census for the district, observed that "the census will be taken by the pound." The portfolio contains schedules for a count of population, housing data, agricultural information and other things. Upon delivery at the headquarters the shipment will be received by Vernon Loel Bartsch, of 1840 East Nob Hill street, who has been appointed supply and assignment clerk. Bateson said the crew leaders would go on duty March 7 and 8, and the last week in March will be given to training the enumerators. They will go to work April 1.

Streets Put on Improvement Program by City Council

Five streets were put on Salem's improvement program by the city council Monday night. They were: Scopell avenue from Candalaria boulevard to Boice street. Catterlin avenue from Center to Fredrick. Bush from Fir to Saginaw. Yes from Electric to Rural, and Judson from High to Church. The council was favorable to a petition from Salem building contractors who need parking accommodations on the streets at buildings in parking meter districts. They proposed that one meter be hooded for their use and that they deposit $15 with the city, to be refunded at completion of the project. Referred to the planning and zoning commission was a letter from the state highway commission urging the city to adopt setback lines on Portland road sufficient to permit the minimum right of way of 80 feet without interference with buildings on the street. The minimum right of way is 40 feet on each side of the center line.

Sues for $21,605 For Bums Rush

A man who was thrown out of a beer tavern on November 4, 1949, has sued the operators and bartender of the tavern for $21,605 damages. A complaint was filed in Marion county district court Tuesday.

S. L. Jespersen, the complainant, alleges that he was bodily tossed out of the establishment by Jack and Minnie Reimer and Henry D. Palmer. The Reimers operate the tavern, and Palmer is employed there as bartender. The complaint states that Jespersen received a broken leg in the scuffle, and that the defendants refused to offer aid, leaving Jespersen sprawled on the sidewalk until a passerby summoned an ambulance. Jespersen claims he was forced to pay $605 medical expenses as a result of the injury. The complaint seeks judgment in that amount, plus $21,000 punitive damages.

Jaycees to Survey Migrant Labor Issue

Members of the Salem Junior Chamber of Commerce were called upon Tuesday to undertake a project of study of migrant labor problems by John Haukenson, chairman of a First Congregational church group dealing with that subject. The speaker, who contended that the migrant worker problem affects every person in Salem and Marion county directly or indirectly, pointed out that some 4500 migrant workers are in this area during the peak of the harvest season.

He emphasized that some 200 families are believed to be in the area during the winter months.

The pressing problems of the migrant worker are needs for housing, winter employment and a community concern for the problem, the speaker said.

CAP Inspected By Major Angle

The Salem branch of the civil air patrol was visited Monday night by Major Hugh Angle, state organization inspector. The major came to assist Captain Del Gosser of the local group to get the CAP cadets ready for the spring training program.

Major Angle said, "Salem has more opportunity than any other group in the state in that they have a building and good equipment."

Officers' training was discussed by the major and he also talked about the possibility of a transfer to Salem of several L4 training planes for the use of the cadets.

Oregon Slow

A low bid of $72,617 for alterations in the bathrooms of the Eastern Oregon State hospital by the Weaver-Stafford Construction company was accepted by the board.

A contract by the California Oregon Power company to supply the Klamath experiment station with electric power for 7 mills per kilowatt hour was accepted. The bid was so low that even State Treasurer Walter Pearson, pro-public power advocate, was surprised. The state pays the Portland General Electric company 7.8 mills for power supplied to state buildings in Salem.

Solicitation of state employees for the American Red Cross campaign was approved by the board and Harold Phillippe, in charge of the accounting division of the secretary of state's office was appointed to handle the solicitation in state offices.

The board approved the second payment on the 1949 flax crop to growers contracting with the state. The payment was $15 a ton for No. 1 flax and $12 for No. 2, bringing the payments on these grades to $45 and $38 a ton. The board also approved final payment on No. 3 flax at $8 per ton, bringing the total to $20.

Payments were authorized for $2,307.79 due Rowland Plumbing and Heating company for work performed in January on boilers at the Woodburn Boys' school; $13,522.72 to W. R. Ramson & Sons, for work in January on new boilers at Fairview home and $31,966.44 to same firm for January work on new boilers at the state hospital.

Parking of vehicles on Portland road from Lane avenue to the north city limits is prohibited by a resolution approved Monday night. It was advised by the state highway department and had been tabled from a previous meeting. It is in the interest of safety.

No protest was made in a public hearing on petition of Louis Lorenz for an exchange of properties at the southeast corner of 12th and Mission to legalize the present location of buildings with relation to an alley. The city exchanges a strip 4 feet by 168 for another of similar size for which Lorenz paid $500.

A public hearing on change of zone from Class I to Class II residential in Block 32 of University addition was followed by passage of an ordinance bill for the purpose.

The council authorized repayment of a note for $50,000 to the United States National bank plus $252.80 interest. The note dates from last November.

A resolution was adopted prohibiting the parking of vehicles on both sides of 14th street 40 feet from the north and south lines of State street.

March 27 was set as the date for a public hearing on the question of vacating certain streets and alleys, never used by the public, on petition of the Salem school board.

The safety of school children on South Capitol street between Bush school and the school playground was discussed and the city manager and the chief of police were instructed to investigate before the drawing of a resolution.

An ordinance bill was passed providing for the renumbering of houses in certain parts of the city.

To Contact Debtors—Roy H. Hageman of 1235 Vista avenue has filed an assumed business name certificate for Personalized Business Agency. The new business will make personal contacts with delinquent accounts, but is not intended to be a collection agency.

CAP Training Plane—This Salem cadet is in the civil air patrol's newly-commissioned training plane. The Salem patrol was visited Monday night by Major Hugh Angle of Portland.

GI's Ma Perkins Gets Valentines From Vets

Mrs. Amy Perkins, Australian woman who befriended GIs during the war in her home country, and later came to this country, including Salem, to visit them, is now in Pennsylvania. Mrs. Perkins was in Salem a number of weeks, and while here worked in a cannery to help pay her way along. She is affectionately known by the GIs as "Ma" Perkins.

Bomber Ditched

Coast guard vessels were en route from Port Angeles and Ketchikan. For several hours developments were hidden by military secrecy. Capt. William Pratt, assistant public relations officer at McChord air base, said instructions not to discuss the B-36 were telephoned by Brig. Gen. C. S. Irvine, base commander at Carswell. Later a spokesman at headquarters of the strategic air command, Omaha, Neb., confirmed that the plane was missing and took steps to break the blackout of information.

The eighth air force at Fort Worth said the distress calls were relayed by another B-36 which also was flying from Eielson base to Fort Worth. The second plane was due to reach Carswell field in mid-afternoon. Distress Signals Heard

A military air transport plane, bound for Seattle at about the time distress signals were heard, reported seeing a light flicker and fade on Queen Charlotte sound, eighth air force headquarters said. McChord air base officers reported that the B-36 had been given operational control of the search, assisted by the U.S. air force.

As the search progressed planes were dispatched from distant bases. Two B-29s were sent from Fairfield-Suisun air base in California. Two more were dispatched from Great Falls, Mont., where they had been based in search for the missing C-54 in the Yukon. Eight B-29s were sent from Spokane air base.

Fourteen coast guard planes were also engaged in the search.

Eggers Are Home—Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Eggers, Rt. 5 Box 143, who have been visiting in Florida and other southern states for the last five weeks, have returned home.

Waives Hearing—K. J. Bernard has waived preliminary hearing in Woodburn district court on a charge of obtaining money by false pretenses, and is being held for the grand jury in lieu of $200 bail.

The government is standing by with a wait-and-see attitude.

Federal officials apparently hope that court-ordered contract negotiations, resuming tomorrow in Washington, will hasten the strike's end.

CARD OF THANKS
To those who expressed their sympathy in so many beautiful and practical ways during our recent bereavement, we extend our heartfelt thanks. A. F. KREFT and FAMILY. 38

Miners Stand Pat

The coal strike situation was unchanged in Ohio, Virginia, Illinois, Alabama and West Virginia along the larger producing states. One West Virginia digger was asked if the men are observing Lewis's 70th birthday which came last Sunday. He replied: "Yes, the miners probably will be celebrating John L. Lewis's birthday for two more weeks." The strikers did not seem much concerned with President Truman's Taft-Hartley court action aimed at ending the strike. Nor with Lewis's work orders.

The question now is what Uncle Sam will do about enforcing his stop-strike command.
