The double-ring service was used.

Showmanship With Seasoning

The cheapest fish at your local market can be a popular repeater on family menus. The thrifty technique that will put the budget seafood special into the preferred treat category is a simple matter of showmanship with seasonings—and no need for expensive truffles or almonds either. A cup of beer or ale plus a bit of prepared mustard and a dash of paprika, for example, will transform familiar flounder into a savory surprise that will be a star performer for family dinner or a company feast.

Savory bread crumb stuffing is another trick for glamorizing bargain counter seafood specials that's easily achieved. Sweet and sour seasoning technique is a basic favorite of the ocean resort chefs, that uses beer as the base of the sauce. The delicate malt flavor co-stars with onion, peppercorns and a dash of Worcestershire to achieve an entirely different tang that will make fillets of cod or haddock taste like entirely new delicacies. Mustard Hollandaise is still another chef's favorite for giving zest to cod or haddock, pickle relish added to lemon butter sauce is added another way to achieve variety in short order. And always remember to give strict attention to timing when cooking fish; even a minute's over cooking can spoil the fine flavor.

DEVILLED FISH FILLETS
2 pounds fillet of flounder
Prepared mustard
3 tablespoons melted butter or margarine
Salt and pepper
1/4 cup minced parsley
1/4 cup aprika
1 cup beer
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
Cut fillets in pieces 4 inches long. Spread lightly with mustard; brush with melted butter; sprinkle with paprika. Broil until beginning to brown. Combine beer and Worcestershire sauce. Continue broiling under low heat, basting with beer, until fish is brown and tender, about 15 minutes. Serve hot, sprinkled with remaining parsley. Yield: 4 servings.
