

Greeks to Vote Next Sunday

Athens, Greece, March 3 (AP)—The outcome of Sunday's parliamentary elections here may directly affect the success of current efforts to patch ruptured trade and diplomatic ties between Yugoslavia and Greece, observers forecast today.

One high diplomatic source said the result of the election certainly will influence negotiations now under way for resuming trade and eventual full diplomatic relations between the two countries.

Greece long has been at odds with Yugoslavia and her other Balkan neighbors because of their aid to the communist-led Greek guerrillas in the civil war.

The rift was widened by Yugoslav charges that Greece was conducting a terrorist campaign against her subjects, arresting Yugoslavs who sought visas to return to their native lands.

Delicate negotiations now afoot for patching this rift are being conducted with a watchful eye to see whether the Greek voters will reject the royalist populists—largest party in the last parliament—when they go to the polls Sunday.

Deputy Premier and Foreign Minister Constantin Tsaldaris, leader of the populists, long has been a symbol and target of communist charges that Greece is "monarcho-fascist."

Coal Lineup—Trucks from as far away as Illinois, Indiana and Michigan and numbering as high as 400 line up to be loaded with coal at an operating coal mine in Somerset, O., while 372,000 striking soft coal miners continue their "no contract, no work" policy. Doctors Disagree as to Cause Of Death of Mrs. Boroto

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

Manchester, N. H., Mar. 3 (AP)—The doctors disagree as to whether Mrs. Abbie Boroto was dead when Dr. Hermann N. Sander injected air into a vein in her arm.

This difference of medical opinion showed up in the closing hours of the prosecution testimony in Dr. Sander's trial for "mercy" killing.

It was the same difference that lesser personages have given in evidence ever since the testimony started one week ago today. This time it came from the top arbiters, whose opinion is usually taken as final.

As today's testimony started, the count stood:

1. Dr. Robert E. Biron that she was alive.

2. Dr. Albert E. Miller that she could have been alive.

3. Dr. Albert Snay that she probably was dead.

Dr. Miller, who is eminent in medical circles, told the first story of an autopsy. He said it did not show the immediate cause of death.

Answering a hypothetical question, he said 40 cubic centimeters of air, the amount the state charges Dr. Sander injected, was enough to have caused death in Mrs. Boroto's condition.

To a second hypothetical question he answered that in his opinion air killed her. He said, however, that the autopsy was performed too long after death to prove whether air was the cause.

He gave the defense support for its contention that Mrs. Boroto's last gasp could have been from an already dead body.

This is the gasp which her nurse told about just as the air was injected.

The only other sign of life shown by the prosecution for the air injection period was slight twitching of face and arms.

Dr. Miller did not testify about twitching, but said that for some hours after death it is possible for skeletal muscles to move. These are the muscles which attach one bone to another.

Dr. Miller added a new chapter to the almost unbelievable record in this case of the ability of a human being to stay alive.

The autopsy showed not only the original cancer in intestines and liver, but added five new sites. They were kidneys, thyroid gland, adrenal glands, abdominal walls and lymph glands, which are pumping stations for the watery white fluid that flows slowly in tissues.

And blood clots had checked the flow of blood in the lower half of her body.

Dr. Miller said there was no proof that any of these things caused death. He said a person can be pulseless for days, but still live.

The nearest he came to defining death, under prodding of the defense, was to say it is the moment when the body's organs cease to coordinate so completely that there is no chance of getting them to work together again.

Gervais Card Club Offers Four Tables

Gervais—Four tables of cards were in play at the "500" Community Card club, with Mrs. Fred Manning and Miss Freda Manning in charge. High scores were held by Mrs. Ernest Andres and Fred Manning and second by Mrs. John Henny, Sr., and Ernest Andres. Mrs. M. D. Henning and Mrs. Cecil Colby will be in charge of the March 14 meeting.
