House Votes for Alaska State

Washington, March 4 (AP)—Alaska's bid for statehood, approved in the house and endorsed by President Truman, headed today for an uncertain fate in the senate.

The house passed a statehood bill yesterday, 186 to 146, after a bitter fight. There were signs of even stronger senate opposition. Senator Butler (R., Neb.), predicted last year that neither Alaska nor Hawaii would reach their statehood goals at this session of congress. The house is scheduled to take up the Hawaiian measure next week.

House members from the more populous states attacked Alaska's qualifications for statehood in yesterday's debate on grounds that its population is too small. They pointed out that Alaska, with about 100,000 population, would have the same representation in the senate as New York or California, with populations exceeding 10,000,000.

Hawaii's Delegate Farrington, a republican, retorted that the system of equal representation in the senate was decided upon by the founding fathers of the nation. He said Hawaii and Alaska should not be penalized for it.

After passage of the Alaska bill, Farrington opened debate on the Hawaii measure. He said congressional committees for years have concluded that the Hawaiian islands meet the qualifications for statehood.

accessible for car parking. It will average about 80 feet wide and will accommodate for free parking almost 200 vehicles. It will not be paved this year. This job, if paving were included, would cost about $30,000, according to estimate. The program is the start of a long-range program which the mayor proposes be financed mainly by taking $25,000 a year from parking meter revenues. Later the program will be carried through, provide some provision for off-street parking. Off-street parking, in effect is provided by the Water street part of the 1950 recommendations. The business men voted their disapproval of a resolution for strict enforcement of the ordinance against parking more than an hour in metered parking stalls where the meters are adjusted on an hour basis. This resolution was not part of the mayor's plan. James Beard, president of the Retail Trade Bureau which called the meeting, presided Friday.

R. H. Muscott Dies at Dallas

Dallas, March 4—Robert Henry Muscott, 55, well known here, collapsed on the street about 11 a. m. Friday and died a few minutes later at the Dallas hospital where he was taken by ambulance.

Muscott was born in Dallas April 6, 1895, son of Henry E. and Molly Muscott. He served in World War I, first as a member of Dallas Company L of the 162nd infantry. He enlisted at Clackamas June 25, 1917 and served overseas until March 24, 1919. After going overseas he served with Company A of the 28th infantry, and was in the fighting at Cantigny and Soissons.

He had been in ill health with heart trouble for some time and spent most of last summer in Veterans hospital of Portland.

He is survived by his mother of Dallas, and two sisters, Miss Jennie Muscott of Portland and Mrs. Nellie Chapin of Salem.

He held membership in Dallas post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Funeral services will be Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Henkle & Bollman mortuary.

Snag Struck

That was being met, it was generally reported, by a proclamation of both parties' good faith in execution of the contract. Efforts were being made to cover the union shop difficulty by a clause putting it into effect pending a final court ruling on its legality. There was no indication of any actual breakdown in the phrasing although operator spokesman George H. Love commented as the drafting committee took a luncheon recess: "Nothing Signed as Yet"

"It looks like there are a hell of a lot of things yet to be done." George H. Moses, who speaks for the steel companies' captive mines, said nothing was signed, "but I'm carrying my pen handy in my pocket."

There was no comment from Lewis at all. It was learned that one of the difficulties in getting the southern operators into the agreement with northern and western operators is arrears payments into the UMW welfare fund. The southerners so far are holdouts.

That arrears account now stands at about $5,000,000. A total of 191 producers have refused to pay for varying periods since the old contract expired June 30. A standstill case is the big Island Creek Coal company in West Virginia which has not paid anything into the fund since that date.

Despite the close approach to final settlement, the government appealed last Thursday's ruling by Judge Keech acquitting the miners' refusal to go back to work as the judge had ordered. Justice department attorneys said they would ask the appellate court to hear the case Monday. It was clearly indicated, however, that if there is a contract by that time, the case will be dropped.

The accord, giving John L. Lewis and his United Mine Workers sweeping gains, but not all they asked for, was reached at a late night session after a day of cresting pressure.
