

Movie Star's Youngsters Put On Real Razzle-Dazzle Circus

By VIRGINIA MacPHERSON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Hollywood, March 9 (AP)—Movie land's younger generation put on a razzle-dazzle circus today and proved one thing for sure: Hollywood doesn't have to worry about where its hams of 1970 are coming from.

They're growing up right in the backyards of Brentwood and Bel-Air and Beverly Hills. They are just as entertaining now as a lot of grown-ups.

The moppets of Eve Arden, Betty Grable, Errol Flynn, Loretta Young, Cornel Wilde, Barry Sullivan, Robert Young, Art Linkletter, etc., smeared on lipstick and rouge with a heavy hand and kicked up their heels for the Buckley Bantam Circus. This is the first big "produc-clowns, cowboys, tumblers, bears, lions, and tigers.

Five-year-old Deidre Flynn was a red-nosed clown in a red and yellow outfit she said she borrowed "from one of my boy friends."

Wendy Wilde, dark-eyed and beautiful at seven, was a willowy circus dancer, and Bobby Linkletter, 4, a rip-roarin' cowboy who had trouble keeping his elbow out of the Flynn lassie's blue eye.

"My daddy hasn't seen my costume yet," Deidre explained. "But I 'spect he'll think it's beautiful. I wish he was here. Maybe he could keep this ole mask from slipping over my face."

Loretta Young's son Peter, was an uninhibited clown, and the poised young doll-shop keeper with the red curls turned out to be Betty Grable's daughter Vicki.

But the hit of the show was tiny Harrison Cohn, four-year-old son of Columbia studio boss Harry Cohn.

This young gent showed up in top-hat, white tie, and tails, cut down to his miniature frame. His chore for the day was to waltz a pretty little blonde around, and he was having his troubles. Every time he bowed low, his top hat fell off.

"I got this costume from the wardrobe department at my father's studio," he explained. "And I'll have to speak to daddy about this darned hat."

The kids did their stuff in a real, honest-to-gosh circus tent

Action on Solomon Appointment Urged

Washington, March 9 (AP)—Sen. Wayne H. Morse (R., Ore.) has urged the senate judiciary committee to act on President Truman's nomination of Gus Solomon of Oregon to be a federal district judge.

Just before the senate recessed last night, Morse said on the floor that he believed committee postponement of action was "unfair" to the nominee.

Solomon is on the bench now under an interim appointment. Mr. Truman's appointments to the federal bench are made "with the advice and consent of the senate." Each is considered by the senate judiciary committee which recommends that the senate either approve or reject the nomination. In Solomon's case, the committee has taken no action.

Purpose Is To Reapportion

Walter H. Dodd, Eugene, graduate assistant in political science at the University of Oregon, was elected executive secretary of the constitutional reapportionment committee, it was announced yesterday.

The constitutional committee is supporting the proposed constitutional amendment filed last November with the secretary of state by the AFL, CIO, Young Republicans and Young Democrats.

Under the proposal the power of reapportionment would be placed in the hands of the governor, secretary of state, and the state treasurer to reapportion the state on the basis of population after each federal census, excepting that no county shall have more than a third of the representation.

Young Beauties Show Tonight

At least a dozen talented beauties from as many high schools will compete for giant-sized trophies Thursday night at the annual Salem Elks club-sponsored drum major contest in the Salem high school gymnasium. The first contestant will strut her stuff promptly at 8 o'clock.

Each girl will perform individually. A march around the gym, an established routine of intricate baton twirls, and a "o-and-a-half-minute" "free style" period will constitute each girl's performance. The girls must also stand for military inspection.

A special attraction will be the appearance of Gloria Ellexson of Sumner, Wash., national champion baton-twirler in 1949. Miss Ellexson will give an exhibition of several minutes in length, and will also serve as one of the judges for the major contest.

Girls who have already signed for the colorful event include Leonore Boyson, Beaverton; Shirley Faust, Canby; Sally Jo LaFollett, Forest Grove; Nancy Beal, Jefferson; Nadine Mickelson, Eugene; Clarine Gilbertson, Roosevelt; Barbara Triplett, Stayton; Elizabeth Johnson, Gresham; Betty Jean Carroll, Salem; Gertrude Gilmore, Toledo; Marvella Truman, Silverton; Joyce Oaks, Tigard.

A few other entries are expected to be filed later. Last year's winner was Katherine Specht of Jefferson, who later became a Salem cherry festival princess.

2,500,000th U. S. Patent Is Issued

Philadelphia, Mar. 9 (AP)—Francis M. Lambert, Philadelphia design engineer, is busy thinking up some new inventions today after receiving the 2,500,000th patent issued by the U. S. patent office.

Lambert, employed for the last 20 years by the Heintz Manufacturing Co., was issued a patent for a quick-acting mechanism for latching doors—a device particularly adaptable for shipboard watertight doors.

The patent office's first patent was issued 160 years ago under the signature of President George Washington to Samuel Hopkins of Vermont for a method of making potash.

The 1,000,000th patent was issued 121 years later in 1911 and the 2,000,000th in 1935.

Walter H. Dodd Named
Eugene, March 9 (AP)—The constitutional reapportionment committee has named Walter H. Dodd, University of Oregon graduate assistant, its executive secretary. The committee is supporting a ballot proposal that would distribute Oregon legislative seats primarily by population. The plan it favors is one drafted by labor organizations, young democrats and some republicans.
