Nation Pours Food Into Arizona Starvation Area

Phoenix, Ariz., March 13 (AP)—Food and clothing poured in from across the nation today for children starving in farm camps near here. "The public response has been wonderful," juvenile officer John Walker said. "Without it, this would be a hopeless situation." One hundred children were discovered Wednesday to be starving in a camp at the back door of swanky desert resorts here.

Similar conditions were reported at farm camps in three other counties. Neither the state nor federal government found any machinery through which they can be helped. While they battled through red tape, relief officers said private charity had started the job.

"We've gotten hundreds of offers of food and clothing from all parts of the country," Walker said. "They'll all be fed now."

A New York sweater manufacturer telephoned today 10 dozen sweaters were on their way by air express. A Durham, N. C., community center was sending clothes.

"Those kids need everything from shoes up—even diapers," Walker said. Meals for Millions, a Los Angeles welfare organization, offered 1,000 pounds of food. A Los Angeles newspaper offered to outfit all the children and buy $1,000 worth of groceries. Soldiers at Williams Air Force base filled a 1½ ton truck with donations. The PTA in Phoenix brought supplies. The Red Cross set up a food kitchen.

Gov. Dan Garvey said, however, it will take $100,000 to carry the needy farm workers through until June when they can get jobs picking cotton again. Nobody knew where it would come from.

The federal government said no relief funds were available. The state said it didn't have any either.

Arizona Rep. John Murdock said he would try to get food from the U. S. department of agriculture's surplus stockpiles. In that case, Garvey said, the state legislature would have to provide $10,000 to $15,000 a month to bring it here and distribute it.

"These people are here now and we've got to do something for them," he said. "Conditions are bad now but they'll get worse in the next few weeks."

Duck Preview Calls Students

University of Oregon, Eugene, Mar. 13 — High school seniors from all parts of the state will be on the university campus April 14-16 for the first annual Duck Preview.

As guests of the Associated Students of the University of Oregon, the students will have a full schedule of activities put on by Oregon students, according to ASUO President Arthur Johnson of Eugene.

Plans now complete call for a vodvil show, assemblies, sports, luncheons, a dance, and as many other activities as can be crowded into the three days to give the visitors a taste of life on the Oregon campus.

The high school visitors will all be housed in living organizations on the campus and most of the meals will be with these groups. Exchange dinners are to be featured on Sunday, the final day of the preview, so that the students will have the opportunity to meet other university students in their own organizations.

General chairman for the Duck Preview are Steve Church of Portland and Marie Lombard of Cottage Grove. Committee chairmen announced by them include Willard Dode of Eugene and Shirley Willard of Astoria. Registration: Richard Lee and Elizabeth Wright, both of Portland, the Duck Preview dance; Ann Gillenwaters, Monrovia, Calif., and Jerry Meyers, Long Beach, Calif., tours and assemblies; and Stanley Turnbull of Eugene, publicity chairman.

J. Edgar Hoover Fights National Police Force

Washington, March 13, (AP)—FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover today re-emphasized his opposition to a national police force. Apparently disturbed by recent suggestions that the FBI be empowered by congress to go into fields of crime now under the jurisdiction of local and state police agencies, Hoover said:

"I am unequivocally opposed to a national police force in the United States. The old world implications in the very words are abhorrent to me as an American."

During the recent crime conference, some state and local officials suggested that the FBI be authorized to go into local affairs. Attorney General J. Howard McGrath rejected such an idea, however.

Brush College Men Present Program

Brush College—Of unusual interest was the entertainment given by an all-man cast at the Brush College Community club meeting at the schoolhouse, which was given in conjunction with a reception for the new teacher, Mrs. Sigrun Harding.

Joe Singer, local writer, wrote a play entitled "A Rehearsal of Jack Benny's Program," with D. Bradrick as Jack Benny; Kenneth Carlson, Phil Harris; Bob Loucks, Mary Livingston; Joe Singer, Dennis Day; Don Blake, Don Wilson; Kenneth Hunt, Rochester, and the auctioneer, Ted Wangler, Dutch.

Impersonating the three Andrews sisters were Archie Pelker, Albert Van Santen and Jess Hurley. Special musical numbers were presented by Bob Loucks, trombone and musical saw, Ted Wangler, harmonica and music by the Burton boys orchestra. The Brush College Helpers club served lunch after the program.

Holsteins in Line for Sale

Hillsboro, Ore., Mar. 13—Approximately 70 head of carefully selected Holsteins have been lined up for the Oregon State Holstein Breeders association sale at Hillsboro, Monday, April 3, indicating it probably will be the largest of the seven annual sales so far sponsored by the group. Every animal has been passed on by a committee headed by Al Lindow, Hillsboro, and allowed to enter only after approval as to top conformation and good pedigree background. Most of the animals are cows and heavy heifers, recently fresh or heavy springers, but a few heifer calves will be included. The sale is being held to aid newcomers in the business acquire desirable foundation stock as well as to help established dairymen get new blood lines if they are breeding for show purposes or particular types. Catalogs giving the full pedigree, production records and other pertinent facts of each animal are available through R. E. "Rube" Evely, New World Life building, Seattle, who will manage the sale. Charles Adams, of Arcadia, Calif., will be the auctioneer. April 2, the day before the sale, the animals will be on exhibition at the Hillsboro fair grounds, and Evely, a Holstein expert, will be present to consult with dairymen about their breeding programs.
