Fertilizer

The plant has had a varied history, but always the possibility of making it a permanent industry was recognized, and that is the intention of the new owners. About a year ago it was up for bid. Highest bidder at that time to the government agency was Manganese Products company of Seattle at $750,000. The lease of Columbia Metals corporation of Seattle, former operators, expired June 30 last, since when the plant has been idle. Further negotiations between Manganese Products and the government did not materialize, and recently General Services administration notified the Salem Chamber of Commerce that the plant was again up for sale. "They asked us for our assistance in locating interested parties," Manager Cochran said today. We had been standing by waiting for Manganese Products to establish the plant. When it was offered again, Rhoten, Strickfaden and Metzger discussed it, and after several trips to Seattle completed the deal. "For a short time," Metzger said, "there are still inventories to take, then a program of cleaning up before operations start. It is the intention of the corporation to be in production on or about April 15 for a short spring run. This has been urged upon us because of an extreme shortage of nitrogen in this territory just now. "It is also the intention of the company to work out ways and means to put the plant on a permanent basis. This may require a good part of the first year in research work. The new owners plan to produce ammonium sulphate. They will do research work to find some other commodities which might be manufactured in the plant. Of Arch Metzger, Manager Cochran of the Chamber of Commerce said: "He was there during the time the Chemical Construction company had it and produced alumina from clay. Then he carried on with Columbia Metals corporation producing ammonium sulphate. If it had not been for the fine cooperation by Arch Metzger and our senators and congressmen the plant might not have been saved for Salem." At a cost usually mentioned at $4,000,000, but believed to have been more, the plant was built by Chemical Construction company during World War II as a government operation through Columbia Metals to extract alumina from clay. It was experimental, but the plant proved it could be done. The plant went into operation first the middle of 1945. By that time alumina from clay was not so important. The plant went into the manufacture of fertilizer on July 1, 1946, and Columbia Metals took over the operation by lease from the War Assets Administration. Originally the plant was established in Salem by the cooperative effort of the Western States council. A plant was wanted somewhere in the northwest. When Salem seemed to be the logical spot members of the council in other states were cooperative in bringing it here.

Navy Orders

"I walked into this with my eyes open," he said. "I'm doing what I think best for my country." When the furlough becomes effective April 1, his pay will be cut from about $700 a month to approximately $350 a month. He is eligible to retire on three-quarters pay because of credit for his many military decorations. Crommelin said he believed the furlough was a suggestion that pointed to the "desirability of retiring." His answer to that was: "I'm not going to retire. "I've closed the range to the point where I'm hitting them with every salvo, every burst," he added. Court Martial Refused He said he had "respectfully requested" a court martial at the time his navy superiors first cited him for attacking the general staff. A court martial would force an official examination of his charges that the defense department is being "Prussianized" under the joint chiefs of staff. But defense officials have made clear they will not give Crommelin a "sounding board." Nor do they want him to become a "martyr" like the late Brig. Gen. Mitchell, an early advocate of air power. Under navy furlough regulations, Crommelin will have about the same status as an officer on leave. He will be subject to "any dictate or other action" for violation of orders and may be recalled to duty at any time.

Officer Gives Injured Cat 'Mercy Killing'

A Salem police officer used his gun in a "mercy killing" a police report showed Thursday. The officer reported that he had used his revolver to end the suffering of a cat which was struck by an auto in the 1100 block on Edgewater street in West Salem. Washington, March 16 (AP)—Adm. Forrest P. Sherman chief of naval operations, expressed regret today that it was "necessary" to discipline Capt. John G. Crommelin by furloughing him on half pay. Sherman told the United Press that the action was taken because of Crommelin's "continued" insubordination in disregarding orders to quit criticizing defense officials and policies. "I am deeply regretful that it has become necessary to relieve from active duty in the naval service an officer who has in the past rendered distinguished and valiant service to his country," Sherman said. "However, the navy regulations require that all persons in the navy service show in themselves a good example of subordination and that they aid to the utmost of their ability in maintaining good order and discipline. "Continued disregard of this requirement and failure loyally to carry out the intent of orders issued in connection therewith cannot be condoned."

Sec. Brannan Admits 'Serious Tactical Error'

Washington, March 16 (AP)—Secretary of Agriculture Brannan testified today that he made a "very serious tactical error" by proposing a top limit on government benefit payments to farmers in connection with the Brannan farm plan. "My enemies used it to embarrass me all over the country," Brannan told a senate agricultural subcommittee. Later he agreed "opponents" was a better term than "enemies."

7 Point Plan

2. Withdraw military and police forces from the Soviet satellites and "refrain from using the shadow of that force to keep in power persons or regimes" which do not command popular confidence.
3. Drop the present "policy of obstruction" in the United Nations and help make the UN a serious instrument for building international peace and security.
4. Join in seeking "realistic and effective arrangements for the control of atomic weapons and limitation of armaments in general."
5. Stop using communist party apparatus to overthrow by subversive means "established governments with which the Soviet government stands in an outward state of friendship and respect."
6. Quit badgering American diplomatic representatives, who are now being "treated as criminals," and branded as "sinister people" with whom all contact is "pregnant with danger."
7. Stop "systematically distorting to their own peoples the picture of the world outside their borders, and of our country in particular." He assailed Soviet propaganda which he said hammers at the idea of "a capitalist encirclement of a United States craftily and systematically plotting another World War."

Brannan smiled and remarked he had called attention of congress last year to a "suggested formula." He termed this a "very serious tactical error." Both the senate and house rejected proposals to approve the Brannan plan last year even on a trial run basis. The subcommittee has two different potato control bills before it. One, introduced by Chairman Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.), would include a trial run of the Brannan plan. The other, sponsored by Senator Lucas (D., Ill.), would use the present method of price supports but with rigid provisions for production controls. But it still would support prices by means of government purchases instead of the Brannan plan "production payments."

Sublimity First in Red Cross Campaign

Sublimity became the first community to exceed its goal in the current Red Cross fund campaign in Marion county, their report turned in Thursday morning showing a sum of $254 against the quota of $250. Sublimity also was the first community to complete its quota last year. Leonard Hendricks is this year's chairman there. Third report session for the Red Cross campaign workers will be Friday noon at the Senator hotel. Walter Musgrave, general drive chairman, urges every division head to be there to make the report as complete as possible. To date the campaign is just past the half-way mark in the goal of $42,000. J. M. Mjolsness state relations officer with the Red Cross, is to be the speaker for the Friday noon luncheon.

Captain Brown

Brown, Millett, Morris and Carr were defendants before the court of inquiry, which heard a half hundred witnesses during 18 days of sessions between February 3 and February 28. Fechtler said no serious blame was "considered as attached" to Ensign Elwin R. Harris, of Norfolk, Va., the Missouri's assistant navigator, and therefore no disciplinary action was taken in his case. Harris, who was plotting the battleship's position the day of the grounding, was named an "interested party" in the court of inquiry proceedings. One Bright Note One bright note was disclosed by the inquiry and Adm. Smith took note of it thusly: "The engineering watch of the USS Missouri at the time of the grounding proved extremely alert. When confronted with an emergency without any prior warning of approaching danger, they met this emergency efficiently and expeditiously. The engineering plant of the Missouri was shut down in a commendable manner without serious damage." The Big Mo, the nation's only active battleship, ran aground off Old Point Comfort while trying to run a secret electronic range. She remained stuck on her sand shoal for 15 days and was finally refloated February 1 on the fourth attempt. At the concluding session of the court of inquiry February 28, Capt. Brown made a statement to the court in which he said "I and I alone bear the sole responsibility" for the grounding. "As captain of the ship it was my duty to keep her safe and secure. I didn't do it." This was a reversal of the skipper's early defense tactics.
