Truman Budget

The difference between the actual cut in appropriations and the estimated cut in spending is due to the fact that disbursements of many types of appropriations frequently are delayed beyond the end of the fiscal year, and some spending during a year comes from funds carried over from a previous year.

President Truman's budget estimates of expenditures in fiscal year 1951 were $42,438,757,406. The committee said its cuts will hold the planned spending to $41,459,268,346.

Republicans in the house are organizing a drive to make further cuts when the bill is ready for amendment. They say they want to reduce the government's planned spending to a figure within $1,000,000,000 of the $37,305,586,034 in anticipated revenues next year.

The defense department was cut $203,332,700 in cash. It asked for $13,028,675,000 cash and $1,085,785,000 in contract authority. For the present year it received $13,055,562,498 in cash and $2,636,301,000 in contract authority.

The veterans' administration was allotted $5,801,782,795, a cut of $205,832,200 from what it wanted and $528,736,205 less than it received this year. The bulk of this money is for veterans' pensions, hospital facilities and benefits under the GI bill of rights.

The atomic energy commission was put down for $647,820,000 in cash and $300,150,000 in contract authority. It asked for $709,800,000 cash and $333,500,000 in contract authority. This year it received $702,930,769 cash and $466,075,628 in contract authority.

Other highlights of the committee action: It recommended a new and tough anti-deficiency provision to prevent federal agencies from incurring unauthorized deficits or overspending their allotments. Officials violating the provision could be jailed for two years and fined $5,000.

It approved funds for employment of 1,000 more tax enforcement agents, and for more anti-monopoly work.

It suggested that the post office department consider saving some money by reducing the number of daily mail deliveries in city areas.

It sharply cut money for federal aid in construction of hospitals, but provided extra funds for studies in developing the

Little Dallas Lad Alarms Community with Promenade

Dallas, March 22—There is nothing unusual about Jeffrey Hunter's wanting to take a walk over the half-mile route to his grandmother's house even though he is only four years old. But when the little lad took the walk at 4:30 a. m. clad in his sleepers, he aroused considerable fuss around town.

Jeffrey, four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Hunter, awakened from his sleep, apparently having undergone a feverish nightmare—he had been ill the day before. He found his way downstairs. Since it was dark and quiet, he came to the erroneous conclusion that his parents were not at home—a mistake that any tot might have made.

The little boy thought of his grandparents, who lived across town, and struck off through the cold night. The front door was locked only from the outside.

An astonished patrolman, Officer Charlie McCarthy, noticed the boy heading westward about six blocks away from the Hunter home, picked him up in the police car and tried to learn his identity.

Meanwhile the parents had heard something of the boy's disturbance as he left, and went to see what was the matter. When they found him gone, they immediately called the police. Thinking possibly that the lad might have gone to the home of the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Tracy, they also called them. Firemen had just returned from the sawmill fire at Derby and they joined the search.

Firemen met the officer with the boy. They took him to the City hall and started to bundle him in a blanket when the grandparents drove up and took him home.

The lad was none the worse. The lad was none the worse for his experience, but the parents expect to give him some definite training on nocturnal hikes to grandma's house.
