Campus Clippings

By CHARLOTTE ALEXANDER

The college is waiting with open arms for the arrival of high school seniors this week-end. The days are packed with activities both educational and social. Friday afternoon the campus will be featured with tours through the different buildings. Friday night the Memorial Union will open its doors to display the numerous activity rooms.

On Saturday morning all of the seniors will join in a general meeting to help orient the high schoolers to the college routine.

In the afternoon the traditional freshman-sophomore games, burning of the green, and rally squad announcements will be held on lower campus. For the finale Saturday night an all-school talent show and dance in the coliseum is planned. Modern dancing, live "bronze statues," a crack drill team, bebop, and the first college dance in the coliseum will finish the eventful week-end. These are only a few of the mass activities planned. All of the living groups are scheduling firesides, picnics, or parties to fill in the spare moments. The week-end promises a good look at "the best school in Oregon" for all future Staters.

Politics has again stepped into the limelight with the coming of spring term. The gay Peasant party, which revolted against the long ruling party last year, is back in full swing, but lacking much of the original vigor. Since the new constitution has been in effect, Oregon State has all of the government troubles of a state or nation. Senators, presidents, and other candidates recently elected in the primaries are busy "mud slinging" and campaigning. We even have a third party, which is stressing the joining of a national college government group.

Queens and more queens are filling the campus these days. The contest is now under way for the selection of the "Little Colonel" for the Military ball, Ag queen, "Miss Fashion Plate," and numerous fraternity sweethearts.

In Portland last week, Freshman Joan Rutter was selected as Cinderella from a field of 25 finalists. Joan will receive a
