

AT HOME

■ Almost next door to you, wherever you live in the United States, there's a new world of vacation attractions. Whether you prefer to explore the byways of the cities or relax in the peaceful countryside, you'll find recreation within reach of your leisure time and your holiday budget. Travel experts say prices have been pared this year. The skyways offer lower-cost coach flights as well as luxury trips. Railroads have planned special excursions. New highways invite motorists and bus travelers. Resorts stress economy. You can cruise along inland lakes and rivers, climb mountains, swim at thousands of beaches, go dude-ranching, bicycling, hiking or just laze away the sunshiny days. Stores in town have stocked up on all the vacation supplies you'll need, with windows that invite you to shop and values that urge you to buy. Here are just a few ways to get more fun out of life.

■ You can depend on dude ranching to work up an appetite. Modern chuck wagons follow the trails of hungry horseback riders in Arizona, and food cooked outdoors tastes good.

■ Trips to the nation's historic shrines combine recreation with the thrill of learning at first hand the facts of American history and tradition. Millions annually visit such famous places as Williamsburg, Va., an authentic restoration of a colonial community. This view shows the walkway in the Governor's Palace garden. The Palace is one of many exhibition buildings on display. Tourists come from almost every state.
