Lightning Hits Home While Family Absent

When Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Barnes of Ward drive returned home early this week from California where they went to attend the funeral of a relative, they found their home had been struck by lightning during Saturday evening's electrical storm.

The bolt entered and left a bedroom of the house leaving two small holes about thumb size. The bolt followed the picture mold around the room and left through the roof. Although wallpaper was set afire and some of the woodwork scorched, the blaze died out without further damage.

All of the fuses in the house were blown out, crippling the water supply system for a time.

McKay Talks to Grange Meeting

Ontario, Ore., June 13 (AP)—Oregon's Grangers, talking over their problems, had words today from the head of the state government and will get more tomorrow from a candidate for that position.

Last night they heard about one phase of national government and how it affects them.

Gov. Douglas McKay was today's state-government speaker. Democratic gubernatorial nominee Austin Flegel will be tomorrow's.

Last night's speaker on government was Norman Stoll, general counsel for the Bonneville power administration.

Stoll told the annual Grange convention delegates that there would be a lot of northwest power development proposals in the next congress.

Next year, he said, might be the year of major decisions.

Grangers' attitude on power questions should be reached by a study of the merits:

"There is too much at stake in these water resource development questions to permit these matters to be settled in a battle of catch words, slogans and epithets," he said.

The Grange, he said, has helped through its public power activities in promoting use of electricity and in keeping rates down. Homes and farms in the northwest use two and a half times as much electricity as the national average, he said.

In industry, the northwest because of its available cheap power, produces one-half the country's aluminum, Stoll said.

Medical Credit Bureau Organized in Salem

The bureau will serve in the capacity as a credit information service, as well as a collection agency. In addition, it will provide broker service for real and personal property, especially those involving the medical profession.

Red Cross Service Workers to Meet

Such conferences are held periodically for discussion of policies in home service work in the Red Cross and for exchange of plans of work.

Representatives from Benton, Washington, Lane, Linn, Polk, Yamhill and Marion counties are expected at the meeting.

Miss Katherine Little, area home service consultant, is to attend the meeting.

For the Festival—L. E. Bellows, Portland General Electric lineman, is hooking up the lighting for the Cherryland festival at the State Fair grounds. Shown are the 220 and 110-volt wires for the complete lighting of the stage.

New System for Dealing With Sex Offenders Tried

A new procedure for dealing with sex offenders was launched Tuesday in district court under Judge Joseph B. Felton.

A man who pleaded guilty to an exposure was sentenced to pay a $250 fine and court costs. He was also given a six-month term in the county jail, but the jail term was suspended by Judge Felton in favor of a probation which outlined seven conditions.

Most important of the conditions were those which ordered the 30-year-old veteran to undergo psychiatric treatment. The judge said he expected regular reports from the physician and that the probationer was to report to the court every 30 days.

The terms of the probation enabled Judge Felton to press for rehabilitation of the man despite the fact that his court is unable to order a guilty person to the state hospital for treatment.

The conditions of the parole were suggested in part by a three-page letter to the judge from a Salem psychiatrist who outlined the subject's history.

By this procedure, never before followed in district court in Salem, the 10-year-old girl who was the subject of the criminal case was spared an appearance against the man before the grand jury and before circuit court.

The aim of the court, according to the terms of the probation, is to rehabilitate the man, a first offender, in the hope that similar or even more serious sex offenses would not occur in the future.

Oregon Peach Crop Failure

Portland, June 13 (AP)—Oregon's peach crop will be no better than a third of last year's and in many places will be just about a blank.

The state's apricot crop will not be of commercial importance; its Bartlett pear crop will be a third of last year's but only a little under average; the sweet cherry crop will be less than half of last year's and some 20 percent under average.

These were the highlights of a June 1 condition report by Neils I. Neilsen, agricultural statistician for the department of agriculture here.

The trouble came from the low winter temperatures which killed buds.

His report, issued today, said that injury to sweet cherries in the Hood River and The Dalles districts was greater than at first thought likely and in the Milton-Freewater area reduced the crop to non-significance.

Although the Bartlett pear crop will be under average, fall and winter trees escaped severe damage. However, some harvest reduction is seen in the Hood River valley.

Condition of eastern Oregon prunes was reported at 17 percent of normal—lowest on record—and of western Oregon at 27 percent, similar to the light year of 1947.

The walnut and filbert picture was not too clear June 1, the report said, but the outlook was for about a 50 percent crop.

There was little damage to apples and close to an average crop is in prospect, the report said.

McKay Makes Reappointments

Mrs. Lee Patterson, Portland, and Hugh G. Ball, Hood River, were reappointed by Governor McKay today to four-year terms on the state public welfare commission.

Mobile Radio Transmitter

Salem, June 15 and 16, will be visited by a mobile radio transmitter, capable of sending messages to the far corners of the world.

The station, whose call letters are W6IHI and MARS AGIHL, is to be located on North Church street directly across from the post office and the Army and Air Force Recruiting station and will be open from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m.

During its stay here relatives will be permitted to send radio messages to servicemen anywhere in the world free of charge. A public address system on top of the truck will enable the public to hear messages being broadcast. The unit will keep an hourly check with Sixth Army headquarters at the Presidio of San Francisco, sending weather reports and official messages.

The two and a half tone radio station is operated by Sgt. Fred G. Thourot and will have the services of hundreds of amateur stations affiliated with the military amateur radio system, as well as many hundreds of "ham" stations in this country and overseas.

Reorganize South Salem Postal Routes

Reorganization of the residential routes south of State streets has been completed Postmaster Albert C. Gragg stated Tuesday.

The plan will be gradually extended throughout the city and when completed will mean a reduction of five routes over the system in effect prior to the economy order issued by the postmaster general.

Under a temporary schedule four men have been carrying five routes on a basis of one delivery a day. Now, the routes have been so organized that each individual carrier will have his own route.

No regular employees have been dismissed under the reorganization and it is not contemplated that any will be, Gragg states. Much of the standby help will be used as vacation relief during the summer months.

Willamette Upped 2 Feet by Rains

The Willamette river came up more than two feet during the 24-hour period ending Tuesday morning and continued slow rises are due the next 12 to 36 hours, reports the weather bureau. Nothing serious is anticipated at this time, however, the river levels being very low.

At Salem the river measured 4.7 feet Tuesday as against 2.4 feet Monday morning.

Cloudiness and warmer temperatures are in prospect for Wednesday, the daily forecast states. Only .01 of an inch of rain was measured for here in the 24-hour period ending at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday, but the month's total to date is nearly two inches, 1.98 inches being recorded.
