A LOOK AT KINGSPORT, TENN.

City of 15,000 Votes Money To Build Auditorium in Center

(Editor's Note: Here is another dispatch to the Capital Journal from Col. Mark Hillary, executive secretary of the Salem Memorial Auditorium association who is making a 12,000-mile survey of the way other cities have approached the problem of an auditorium. Today's report is of Kingsport, Tenn.)

What Kingsport, Tennessee has done with regard to the recreational and cultural life of its community might well set an example for other communities of similar size.

Kingsport can boast something better than 15,000 citizens though no city can really know until the latest figures from the current census are in.

However, it has taken a tract of land centrally located to the residential area and has developed there, in addition to parking lots for 3000 cars, a city swimming pool, an auditorium, a stadium, tennis courts, and picnic grounds.

It has all been done by public referendum and the entire population is enjoying its benefits.

They call this the civic center. They point with pride to the fact that something less than 3.3 per cent of the city income is required to maintain this project inclusive of salaries, maintenance, equipment, etc.

The auditorium is a brick structure of pleasing appearance surrounded by parking area for some 1500 cars.

The auditorium is a level floor with moveable bleacher seats around three sides and with a capacity of 1490 with the main floor seated. The stage is small, measuring only 30 feet deep by 60 feet wide but is ample for the type of productions which are invited to show.

Several name bands have played Kingsport and have paid good returns, but stage shows have not been included owing to the lack of adequate facilities.

The auditorium was built for civic use and not intended to be a source of revenue to the city coffers. The use of the auditorium is restricted to municipal organizations who are charged for use on a straight rental basis which is low enough to allow the organizations to make a profit on an average showing. The basement of the auditorium is used for a rifle range in addition to storage. Rifle clubs held 152 meetings during the 1949 season.

The main floor consists of the auditorium which is surrounded by a corridor.

The auditorium office, lounge, rest rooms, and perhaps a dozen meeting rooms, open off this corridor on the outer perimeter of the building. One such room is adjacent to the kitchen which is well equipped with the very latest accessories. By the use of well-insulated partitioning which folds back, this room may seat 200 or be broken into five separate rooms each seating about 40 persons.

The rooms on the west side of the building are occupied by the national guard unit for instruction and storage. At the rear of

Boom Figures From Portland

Portland, July 1 (AP)—All-time construction volume records for Portland topped for the six-month period ending yesterday. Business was near an all-time high, even the marriage market was booming.

Building permits from January through June totaled $32,100,000. This is $6,400,000 more than for the first half of 1949 and $2,100,000 above the previous peak set in 1948. Residential construction was a major contributor to the boom.

Volume of general business in Portland and its trading area was near record peaks both for June and for the first six months of the year. The June total was $707,500,000. The record month was September, 1948, at $718,000,000. The total for the first six months was $3,500,000,000 compared with $3,800,000,000 in 1948.

Possibly influenced by hostilities in Korea, young people have swarmed to the marriage license bureau the last few days. Many 17-year-old boys, armed with parental consent, have been turned away. The law says they must be 18.

The American Bakers association estimates production of bread in the United States at more than 14,500,000,000 loaves a year.

being amongst its citizenry will do well to visit Kingsport and see what they have done in promoting their civic center.

Portland to Check On Meter Feeders

Portland, Ore., July 1 (AP)—City traffic engineers and police today planned a crackdown on parking meter "nickle feeders".

The Portland Retail Trade Bureau complained that motorists who feed nickels into meters for parking time beyond the allotted one or two hours were preventing proper use of downtown street parking areas.

Under the new plan, police will make spot checks throughout the downtown area to catch "flagrant" violators.

Fred Fowler, traffic engineer, said a survey showed that a small group of business and professional men and their employees parked all day in the downtown district by putting nickels in meters and "deprived others of about 28 per cent of the curb space."

Can You Accurately Duplicate Signature of John Hancock?

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, July 1 (AP)—We make fun of our signatures and call them "John Hancocks."

But the sesquicentennial, the hoe-down which was plotted in honor of the 150th anniversary of Washington as our capital, is serious about John Hancock, the first signer of the declaration of Independence.

Mr. H. was the president of the continental congress when the founding fathers drew up the historic document. As a matter of fact, Hancock served twice as president of the continental congress.

Well, the Sesqui people are staging a nationwide contest to find out who among us can most accurately duplicate the signature of John Hancock. The exposition, which was denied funds by congress is about broke. So all that is at stake for the winner is a few tickets (10) to the annual Washington monument ceremonies to be held here July 4. Win, lose or draw, for money, chalk or marbles, that affair never fails to attract at least a quarter of a million folks.

A scroll 600 feet long and a foot wide will be spread in front of the Washington monument and the names of the winners will be inscribed for posterity.

The Sesqui folks were smart enough to get in their fold a couple or three alert press agents; or let us say in due respect, public relations men.

These fellows searched the District and found several persons named after some of the original signers.

Among them was one John Adams, of Alexandria, Va., which happens to have been one of George Washington's home towns. This current John Adams has a daughter named Abigail. That was the name of the wife of our second president.

Another early entry was a fellow named Samuel Adams. Yet another was Roger Sherman, and another was John Witherspoon. Sometimes you wonder how press agents think up such things.

Whom do you reckon they have among the judges? A fellow named John Hancock, who lives here in the District. And if J. H. is not cantankerous about it—and he'd better not be—he'll be the chairman of the judges.

Other judges of the handwriting contest will be Lt. Iva M. Gullicson, a hand-writing expert for the Metropolitan police department, and one of the high wheels of either the treasury department or the FBI, J. Edgar Hoover, if he isn't too busy that day.

Even without much dough to work with, the Sesqui committee is going to give our town the what-for in the matter of the "Spirit of '76."

We'll hear the liberty bell at the treasury ring; we'll listen to four big bands, including the famed Marine band, Tootle in Parade. And we'll see fireworks—Washington lighted up on the left and Harry S. Truman on the right of a gigantic framework.

It ought to be quite a show. And, by golly, the taxpayers are getting off easy this time. The whole blow-off will cost less than $3,000.

Louisiana, Texas, California, and Arkansas each grows about one fourth of the U.S. rice crop. The United States state department was established as the department of foreign affairs July 27, 1789.

Col. Miles III At Okinawa

Lt. Col. J. M. Miles, who until recently was resident engineer on the Detroit dam project, is recovering from an attack of encephalitis, according to word received here Saturday.

Col. Miles is said to be out of the serious category and will be flown from Okinawa, where he was stationed, to Letterman hospital in San Francisco, around July 15.

The news of Col. Miles' illness came as a shock to the many friends made by the officer in Marion county since he took over construction of Detroit dam.

Employment Soars 61,482,000 in June

Washington, July 1 (AP)—Employment soared 1,751,000 in June to a 61,482,000 total—with 133,000 of 1948's all-time high.

Reporting the figure today, the census bureau noted that month-by-month gains through 1950 have increased the number of job opportunities by 4,535,000 since January.

Despite the June jump in the number of those at work, there was an increase of 327,000 in the unemployed—those without jobs and looking for work.

The bureau said the unemployment increase was "considerably smaller than the expected seasonal change" and was due entirely to a flood of school age youngsters entering the job market.
