No Sugar Shortage, Only War Hoarding

There is no nation-wide sugar shortage but a sudden rush to buy the sweetening product has made it difficult for the refiners to keep pace with the demand, reports Sid McNeil, Salem manager for the Pacific Fruit and Produce company. Grocers have had difficulty in keeping supplies of sugar on hand, especially the 100 pound bags. The war in Korea coming at the time when housewives are doing much of their canning and preserving has upped the demand considerably. Mayor

The two mayors put on a pretty good show ribbing each other about the virtues of their respective Sailems. Elstrom and Mr. Martin are both merchants and on the side talked a good deal of shop.

Under the direction of Mr. Foley the party went on a Cook's tour, visiting historic places and industries. Saturday night Mr. and Mrs. Martin entertained the Oregon visitors at the Corinthian Yacht club at Marblehead. Mr. and Mrs. Hutchinson were there also.

Sunday morning the Chamber of Commerce arranged a breakfast at the Hawthorne hotel where the chamber had advance reservations for the Oregonians. Another tour followed the breakfast, and this included the House of Seven Gables and other famous and historic places.

The mayors exchanged gifts. Mayor Elstrom had taken from here gift packages of cherries and various preserved fruits. In turn President Hutchinson of the Chamber of Commerce presented Mayor Elstrom with a series of booklets on Salem, Mass., and a box of Pequot sheets and two witch dogs, and a box of candy gibraltars to the girls. Mayor Collins presented him with a Guide to Salem, Mass., and a copy of Nathaniel Hawthorne's "House of Seven Gables."

At the House of Seven Gables Mrs. Elizabeth B. McIntire, director of the Gables settlement, presented him with a copy of Samuel Chamberlin's pictorial work, "Salem in Four Seasons." The Elstrom party was obviously thrilled with the historic lore of the old Salem, and Mayor Elstrom told his hosts they should tell the world more about it.

Mayor Elstrom called on Mr. and Mrs. T. T. Haller, who formerly lived in Oregon City. He had not met them previously. Arrangements made for the reception of the Oregon party was largely the result of an advance tip sent to the Salem, Mass., Chamber of Commerce by Manager Cochran of the Salem, Ore., chamber.

The Evening News makes this comment about the visitors: "Salem (Mass.) officials considered the visitors the most appreciative and nicest persons ever to visit this city. They were highly impressed by the mayor as a very fine, personable, modest and dignified individual who was perfectly fascinated by the historic glory of this old city, as well as impressed by its compact shopping center and diversified industries."

Korean Front—Dark arrows show drives by invading North Korean forces on virtually the entire Korean battlefield. Red push in the west has forced U. S. troops to the Kum River's south bank where they hope to make a stand (wedge) north of Taegu, key defense center, until enough material can be brought up to counterattack. Open arrows indicate main supply route from port city of Pusan to the front. (AP Wirephoto map)

Mighty Armada Yanks Dig in

Other allied planes continued lashing blows at communist concentrations and at targets behind enemy lines. Yesterday alone allied airmen reported they destroyed 38 Red tanks and 82 trucks, as well as much other equipment, in 225 combat missions against only token opposition in the air.

On the ground American troops were deployed 13 miles north of Taegu, emergency capital of the battered, United Nations created South Korean republic. This may be their do-or-die line to prevent an Asiatic Dunkerque. A railroad bridge and other spans across the river, which Korean rains at any moment could swell into a raging torrent, have been destroyed.

While the Americans crouched behind their new defense line, on steep banks generally a quarter mile across from the enemy massed on the Kum, the Reds launched a new drive from newly fallen Taegu, 65 miles northeast of Taegu. It spread southwest in what looked like a push to cut the vital rail line between Pusan, southeast port of entry for American reinforcements and supplies, and Taegu.

Gen. MacArthur, United Nations commander, announced the appointment of Lt. Gen. Walton H. Walker, veteran tank fighter of World War II in Europe, as commander of ground forces in Korea.

Medford Cops

Macomber—at that time wanted only for questioning in connection with a series of burglaries and safe-crackings in the Albany area—made good his escape in the timbered Cascade foothills.

In Parked Stolen Car
At 1:40 a. m. today Medford city patrolmen Jack Hunton and Milo Gust noticed a car parked near the west city limits. They radioed headquarters for information on it, then drove up and talked to a man standing near it. As they talked, the radio reported the car was stolen and was driven by Macomber.

Macomber, hearing the report, shoved a pistol in Gust's ribs. Hunton jumped out of the car and Macomber moved off, the two reported. The three exchanged shots in the darkness but none took effect and Macomber headed for some vacant lots. A radio call brought out all available city, county and state police.

Found in Nichols' Home
Acting on a tip, four policemen went to Mrs. Nichols' home. Her son, Ted, is in the Linn county jail at Albany, charged with the burglaries on which Macomber was wanted for questioning.

Korner, soon to be wounded, and sheriff's deputy Kenneth King stood at the rear of the house and shortly spotted Macomber coming up the alley. Korner and Macomber exchanged shots and each was hit. Macomber crawled into the house and state police Lieut. Paul Morgan arrived to take charge. He went to the front door, armed with a sub-machine gun as city patrolman Howard Phillips held a light on the door.

In answer to Morgan's demand, Mrs. Nichols opened the door. Morgan said she told him Macomber was not there. He went in anyway and found Macomber standing near the kitchen.

12 Year Criminal Record
A .32 caliber automatic pistol was found in the bathroom. Macomber's 12-year criminal record includes two sentences to the Oregon penitentiary, one sentence in the Nevada penitentiary, and a term in the Oregon State Training school at Woodburn.

He first was arrested in Tillamook in 1938 for possession of stolen property, and was paroled to his father, Glenn T. Macomber, who now is serving 40 years in the Oregon state prison on a conviction of being an habitual criminal.

Macomber was arrested in 1939 in Dallas for burglary, but the charge was dismissed.

Escaped Training School
He was arrested in Dallas again in 1939 and sent to the State Training School. He escaped four weeks later, but was immediately recaptured in Toledo, Ore., in a gun battle with a state police officer. The officer, who shot Macomber through the skull, was not injured.

But Macomber was given three years in the state prison for trying to kill the officer. He got out in September, 1941.

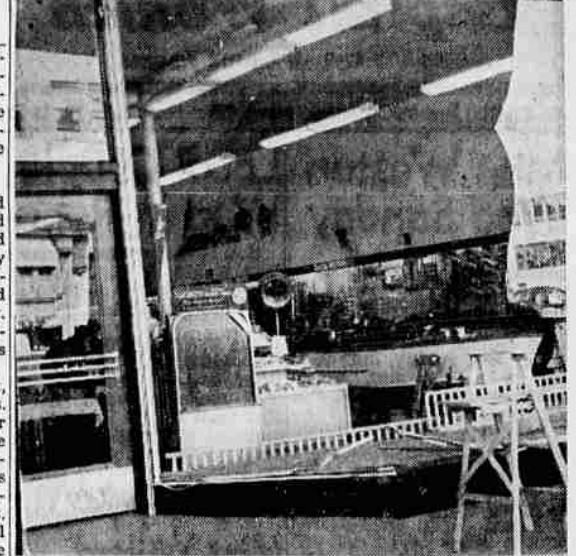

But three months later he was back in the state prison to serve three years for a burglary in Dallas, and was paroled in July, 1943.

State police and prison records show no more arrests until December 5, 1947, when he was sent to the Nevada penitentiary to serve two sentences of 1 to 15 years for two counts of burglary. These crimes were committed at Elko, Nev.

Macomber got out of the Nevada prison last April.

Glass Crash—This high plate glass window at the front of the Salem Hardware company store at 120 North Commercial was broken early Thursday morning when a car driven by Dr. Elmer H. K. Door, 4310 Silverton road, leaped the curb and crashed into the store front. No one was injured.

Short Step to Third World War, Says Benes in Lecture

"It is not only the Korean war which is being waged in the Far East. The western democratic world is at war with the Soviet ruled communist part of the world, and there is only a short step from the present ideological struggle to the third world war."

Such was the declaration of Dr. Bohus Benes in a lecture at Waller hall, Willamette university campus, Wednesday night before several scores of students and townfolk.

Dr. Benes, lecturer on political science during Willamette's summer term stated that "the world is sharply and irrevocably divided into democratic and bolshevik zones. Both sides have just about exhausted all their means with which they waged a cold war for the past five years. All hopes for reconciliation of bolshevism and democracy seem to vanish in view of the fact that the only form of relationship between the east and the west is espionage and underground activities."

"It would be tragic now, when the Korean disaster 'soviet war' revealed such dangerous weaknesses of the American preparedness for defense of democracy, if the soviet government were to choose this summer for delivering to the west what it believes to be the coup de grace to decaying democracies. It would be a war for a complete annihilation of either bolshevism or democracy."

Benes stated that there is only one step to the third world war. "However, that step does not have to be made if democracies, realizing that the climax of the struggle for survival is here, act in time and with spirit of determination. All communists are not equally anxious to win the world tomorrow. They fear the third world war more than democratically minded peoples. If they are faced with the final battle, precisely the third world war, in which they would risk all, especially the existence of the communist party, then they would retreat."

"The Korean war is an excellent opportunity for democracies to regain the spirit of powerful, dynamic defense of democracy all over the world."
