

New Bridge to Replace Old One

The three-span steel reinforced bridge over the North Santiam river which bids have been called by the army engineers, will replace a bridge over the North Santiam just above the town of Detroit.

The bridge, which will connect the Blowout creek and Idanha roads, will be at the upper end of the reservoir to be formed for eight and one-half miles after Detroit dam has been completed.

The road is being constructed by the army engineers in accordance with an agreement with the U. S. forest service, now using the bridge near Detroit for patrolmen and fire fighters required to go on the south side of the river. The present bridge will be removed and the new bridge substituted therefore.
