Thielsen Will Ask Annexation

Annexation to the city probably will be the solution of H. William Thielsen's water problem at his Candalaria Heights home.

If he petitions the city for annexation, which he indicates he will, his property which is barely missed in an earlier annexation, will be the only property involved. For that reason there will be no vote necessary outside the city. But the people inside the city will have to vote on it as in any other annexation.

Mayor Robert L. Elfstrom said Thursday he doubted if it could be put on the November ballot and that it wouldn't be practical to call a special election on any other date, hence that it probably will await the regular spring election in 1952.

In the meantime, however, Thielsen won't be deprived of water. If he petitions for annexation the city will allow him a water connection pending the election, as it has done for other annexation petitioners. And for a time, Herman M. Johnston, owner of City View cemetery, who had threatened to cut Thielsen off from his water supply from the cemetery tank, will continue to let him have water. Johnston has so advised Mayor Elfstrom.

Thielsen's plight was discussed by the city council Monday night, Sept. 11, when he told the council Johnston had said he would cut him off unless he permitted a road across his property.

The result was that the council voted to give not only Thielsen a connection, but 60 other property owners on Evergreen avenue, thereby reversing a city policy relative to furnishing city

Ex-Con Held on Check Charges

Albert C. Mertz, 52-year-old ex-convict, surrendered his prison-made wallet—"a gift from the boys"—along with his other possessions at the Marion county jail Thursday while he awaited an appearance in court to enter a plea on charges of obtaining money by false pretenses.

City detectives, on whose information Mertz was arrested by Portland police, said the one-time inmate of Oregon state penitentiary and San Quentin was wanted in Salem in cases involving some $900 in bogus checks.

Taken to district court Thursday, his case was continued to Saturday for plea to enable him to secure an attorney.

The short, well-groomed prisoner surrendered his possessions to his jailers after the court appearance. His fancy, hand-tooled wallet, a memento of a term at the Oregon institution, was among his belongings. He listed a Portland address.

Resistance

An army spokesman in Washington said no evidence had been received there of such a column of reinforcements moving south toward Seoul.

7th Division Nears Seoul
The U. S. army's Seventh division was located eight miles south of Seoul Thursday, fighting for the last ridge west of the Seoul-Suwon highway.

The job of the Seventh division is to swing around the southern end of Seoul and cut off the Reds' approaches from the southeast.

Entrapment of 5,000 Reds by the U. S. First cavalry division was the standout development on the old southeast perimeter.

The marines' entry into northwest Seoul's narrow streets was met by stiffening resistance.

Field dispatches reported the tank-led leathernecks entered the city at 6 p.m. Wednesday (4 a.m. EST), from their Han river crossing eight miles downstream.

10th Corps in Seoul
The swift allied 10th corps advance from the original second front landing beaches at Inchon, 22 miles away, appeared to have reached the slower house-to-house fighting phase.

The marines made it from the riverside into Seoul in 12 hours. A big battle seemed in prospect.

Many Red Koreans who have fought in the south since their June 25 invasion across parallel 38 were seasoned in communist China's Manchurian armies. Their heavy equipment and planes are all of Russian manufacture.

Capitol Medal Presented Here

Governor Douglas McKay was one of the 48 governors of the nation who joined Wednesday in paying tribute to the keystone anniversary of the national capitol at Washington in ceremonies in each state capitol made possible by cooperation of the nation's air lines.

The actual date of the anniversary was September 18.

At each state capitol an air line hostess, or other air line representative, presented to the governor on behalf of the national sesquicentennial commission a silver copy of the official sesquicentennial commemorative medal to mark the 157th anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone of the United States capitol on September 18, 1793.

In Salem H. E. White, representing Station Manager Hal Sweeney, acted for United Air Lines in making the presentation.

The presentations launch a nation-wide sale of the medals that were struck at the United States mint, on order of President Truman, to bring about greater understanding and appreciation of the principles upon which the nation was founded.

In Washington, anniversary ceremonies were conducted at 11 a.m. Led by Vice President Barkley, sesquicentennial commission officials paid tribute to the significance of the original Masonic cornerstone ceremony on the hour at which George Washington laid the cornerstone, the first act in creating the permanent capitol.

The Washington ceremonies will be held at the law library entrance to the east portico of the capitol, directly above the location of the cornerstone.

East German

The communist press stepped up its propaganda barrage against the west, shrilling cries of "Ami (American) and Tommy (British) go home." On the other side of the ledger the Russians released, after 14 hours of routine questioning, two American military police they had nabbed yesterday in the border area. The men said they had not been mistreated.

Berlin's barge traffic with west Germany remained partially crippled as some 50 barges lay tied up here with their cargoes. The Russians would not clear their crew lists for interzonal passage, claiming the lists were out of date. The German skippers declared clearance of new lists would keep them idle for months.

East Berlin cold storage houses, keeping goods for west Berlin firms, told the westerners to evacuate. The latter called it "more communist chicanery." Plans were made to seek American financing for a west Berlin warehouse.

Today's electric blackout try was the second time in three months that the communists had cut power delivery to the west. They laid their action to a dispute over payments. West Berlin authorities branded it as a purely political move.

Chest Campaign Drive Launched

Salem started its drive to raise $111,000 for the 1950 Community Chest fund Wednesday night with a pre-campaign kick-off dinner at the Senator hotel.

Speaker for the pre-campaign affair, which marks the opening of the pre-campaign drive for larger donations, was Charles A. Sprague, editor of the Oregon Statesman and pre-campaign chairman for Salem's first Community Chest campaign 14 years ago.

In his talk Sprague told the group that the welfare of orphaned children and character building institutions was dependent on the success of the drive. He praised civic leaders who take time to help with Chest work and predicted that with the help of new workers Salem this year would go over the top.

The speaker also noted that funds raised in the drive mean better citizens developed by aggressive chest agencies, who receive funds from the drive.

Date for the main drive, when individuals will be solicited for contributions is October 3 to October 13.

Presiding at the dinner Wednesday night was A. C. Haag, pre-campaign chairman, and among those introduced were Loyd Warner, state Community Chest president; Carl Hogg, chairman for the general drive; Al Loucks, president of the Salem Community Chest; and William M. Hamilton, first president of the Salem Community Chest.

Mehama Petition Not Allowed by Court

After investigation the status of Blair street in Mehama for which a petition asking oiling and surfacing of the street by the county was filed Tuesday, the county court denied the petition.

Grounds for denying the petition were that the Blair street was not on the county road system and therefore not eligible for public road funds. At the time of the filing of the petition, which had 24 signatures, it was stated that the street had been torn up by logging trucks.

Army spokesmen said the landing had occurred several days ago. In old Pusan beachhead (1) the allies are gaining on all fronts against North Koreans. Red reinforcements are being rushed from southeast toward Seoul (2) in effort to stem allied drive from Inchon beachhead. U. S. marines have crossed Han River and are moving on Seoul from northwest. ## Truman Lauds

When a reporter asked whether he knew of many democratic senators whose records equalled or surpassed Taft's, the president replied very few and added:

There are more republicans who voted right than democrats who voted wrong, so the country still has a bi-partisan foreign policy.

Praises Congress
The president said he was very well pleased with the record of congress now about to recess. He said it had given him not all but substantially what he asked for in the way of legislation, and had accomplished the business it set out to do. He said he had no plans to campaign for democrats to the new congress.

Mr. Truman was asked at the outset today to comment on Gen. George C. Marshall's testimony before a senate armed services committee. A reporter said Marshall disclaimed responsibility for this government's China policy in 1946 when he visited China on a special mission.

Comments on Marshall
Mr. Truman replied that General Marshall at the time was not secretary of state, but a special envoy for him. He added that Marshall, sworn in today as the new secretary of defense, had written instruction for him when he went to China.

The president said a new deputy secretary of defense to succeed Stephen T. Early, resigned, will be appointed as soon as possible and he is still looking for men to fill posts under the economic control act.

Mr. Truman predicted the foreign ministers meeting in New York will attain their objectives before they are through. He said they are making great progress.

Asked what U. S. policy will be on whether to go beyond the 38th parallel in Korea in cleaning up Korean communists, the president said that is a question for the United Nations since the forces opposing the Korean Reds are a U. N. organization.

He added he will abide by the decision of the U. N.

He said the anti-communist bill just passed by congress has not reached him yet, but he will not keep anyone in suspense very long about his position on it. A veto has been predicted.

Reminded that a group of foreign correspondents were attending the news conference, Mr. Truman said he was more than happy to hear that. He said he expected to meet them after the conference and ask them how they liked the greatest show in Washington.
