Report Nations Waterfowl Show Population Comeback

Washington, March 21 (AP)—North America's migratory waterfowl have made a comeback and are more plentiful than since 1949, the fish and wildlife service said today.

This good news for sportsmen does not imply more liberal hunting regulations next fall, however.

Dr. Clarence Cottam, assistant director of the service, told a reporter hunting regulations are based entirely upon spring and summer reports from nesting areas, and not upon the annual winter inventory.

Albert M. Day, service director, said in a prepared statement that the 1951 mid-January inventory showed an upward trend sufficient to offset a 20 per cent decline noted in the 1950 inventory. Cottam said that frequently the fertility of waterfowl is high when the population level is low, and a large bird population often produces a disappointing hatch.

The January inventory indicated that the Pacific flyway had a wintering waterfowl population somewhat better than last year, particularly in geese, while the central flyway total was down slightly.

The Mississippi flyway showed a "good recovery" from 1950. The Atlantic flyway also indicated some improvement for the second consecutive year.

In the inventoried areas, the service said, ducks accounted for 75 per cent of the waterfowl population, geese 13 per cent, coots eight per cent, and brant and swans, each less than one per cent.

The January inventory covered the major wintering grounds in Alaska, Canada, United States, Mexico and the West Indies. In the United States alone, 1,300 cooperating observ-
