

Generals Recall World War I

Two generals, one with the Marine Corps and the other with the Oregon National Guard met in Salem Monday and recalled their days in France in World War I.

The generals were Maj. Gen. Alfred H. Noble, commanding general of the Department of the Pacific, U.S. Marine Corps, here as Salem's Armed Forces speaker, and Brig. Gen. Raymond Olson, assistant adjutant general for Oregon.

Though they had practically served side by side in World War I, the men were meeting for the first time. However, that did not hamper their recalling those days of the first World War.

General Noble has two sons in the Marine Corps, Capt. Alfred H. Noble, Jr., who leaves for Korea the first of next month, and First Lt. Richard F. Noble, on maneuvers in the Mediterranean.

During World War I General Noble was in France with the Sixth Marine Regiment, as a part of the Second division. He left for overseas in October, 1917, and returned to the United States in August, 1919, being with the occupation forces in

Protest Klamath River Diversion

Eureka, Calif. (AP)—Concern over Bureau of Reclamation plans to use water of the Klamath and Trinity rivers was expressed Monday at a meeting of the Klamath River Watershed Development association.

Frank Jenkins of Klamath Falls, Ore., publisher and association president, told the session here:

"Not only is the U. S. Bureau of Reclamation threatening to take water from the Trinity river, which would also affect the Klamath, but they are likewise threatening to divert the Klamath River."

The Trinity joins the Klamath in Northern California.

The bureau of Reclamation plans would divert part of the Trinity's flow eastward into the Sacramento, whose waters now irrigate California's Central valleys. Bureau plans also would divert part of the Klamath's flow.

Water users in both areas are protesting losing any of the water.

State Sen. Randolph Collier of Yreka told the group he also has asked congress to take no action on the Trinity and Klamath projects until the survey has been completed.

The association seeks regional development of the Trinity and Klamath reflecting local needs.

GEN. DODD'S KIDNAPPING

Value of Human Life Shown In Koje Island Incident

By PHIL NEWSOM (United Press Foreign Analyst)

He also has recognized in advance the propaganda use that Peiping radio will make of the situation, and U. N. commanders have emphasized it can have no effect on the Panmunjom negotiations.

It can, however, have no effect on the outcome of the Korean truce negotiations.

The story of the kidnaping of Brig. Gen. Francis T. Dodd by communist war prisoners may never be told in its entirety.

For instance, 8th army Commander Gen. James A. Van Fleet has wondered publicly why Koje island prison guards did not rush in immediately for some kind of an attempt to rescue Dodd after the prisoners seized him.

Newsman have been allowed to visit Koje, but their movements have been carefully screened, and both officers and men in charge of guarding the tough, hard-core communist prisoners of Compound 76 have been ordered into silence on the whole affair.

Dodd himself first was scheduled officially to answer questions at a news conference. Later, the conference was cancelled and a statement over Dodd's signature was issued.

Thus parts of the story continue to bear the official label, "top secret."

At any rate, a communist flag flies over Compound 76, and U. N. guards dare not enter its gates.

Brig. Gen. Charles Colson, who negotiated Dodd's release, said:

"I do admit that there have been instances of bloodshed where many prisoners of war have been killed and wounded by U. N. forces."

Presumably, Colson referred to the Koje prisoner riots of February and March in which 91 persons died, including an American soldier.

The U. N.'s new supreme commander in the Far East, Gen. Mark Clark, has pointed out that whatever concessions the U. N. made, were made under duress and the necessity of getting General Dodd out alive.

AFL Clerks Ask For Wage Boost

George T. Lightowler, union secretary, said the 28 1/2 cents included a wage increase, an employer-financed welfare program and several other benefits.

The union has been negotiating with employers for some time, he said.

Lebanon Favors Standard Time

Lebanon—If early sentiments expressed both by residents of the city and rural areas are followed by the city council, Lebanon will stay on standard time this summer. During the first three days of the Lebanon Express conducted poll, 72.5 per cent of the more than 200 persons voting, favored standard time.

Residents living inside the city favored standard time by a two to one edge, while outside the city limits the ratio was over 5 1/2 to 1. Voting will continue through May 20, when the results will be available for the city council session being held that evening.

A special council session is being called for May 13 but no action on the time issue is expected at that time.
