Approve Farm Labor Camp Site Purchase — Members of Salem's new industrial council, organized to build payrolls in the area, look over the old farm labor camp on Turner road across from the airport. The industrial council members voted Wednesday to recommend purchase of the 96-acre site by the chamber of commerce for future industrial development. Left to right are: Clay Cochran, John Durr; Carl Hogg, chairman; Guy Hickok, Burr Miller, Loyal Warner, Robert Fenix, Fred Sterrett, Lynn Smith, Clair Brown, Leo Childs, Robert Sprague, Arthur Atherton and Robert Letts Jones.

tion of the Salem by-pass route of Highway 99E. A cloverleaf will be located on the property separating the by-pass and the North Santiam highway. Just what industries may locate on the property has not been determined, but several large concerns are angling for Salem or Willamette valley locations. One member of the council advisedly mentions that it would be an excellent location for a truck and warehouse location, since truck traffic would be easily reached from there to the by-pass route both north and south and the North Santiam both east and west.

As for other transportation the area is in easy distance from McNary field, while the Geer line of the Southern Pacific is less than a mile away and the main line not far away. Industrial construction on the ground, investigation shows, will not be objectionable to airport activities since building heights will be regulated and without smoke stacks.

Manager Clay Cochran stressed that the purchase of the ground will not put the Chamber of Commerce in competition with any other property owners for the reason that it will not be the only industrial location made available. The chamber's industrial map shows a number of them.

Relative to the property east of town to be purchased the industrial council reports that both the cannerymen and the growers consider that it has served its purpose and is no longer needed for housing. This report was made to recent meeting of the board of directors by Guy N. Hickok and Linn C. Smith, who represented the chamber in Agricultural Housing, and they mentioned its availability for purchase as industrial ground.

Financing of the purchase is pretty well agreed on, it is indicated, and a plan is in the hands of a special finance committee composed of Louis Neuman, chairman, Rex Gibson, Walter McCune, Chester Loe and Ted R. Hobart.

Campaign Costs — State Sen. Ben Musa, The Dalles democrat who was defeated for congress, reported Wednesday that he spent $437 on his campaign.

Story of Lodge

Horn told how the first regalia for Chemeketa lodge was made by the wives of the members of the lodge. That regalia he said was used until the widow of an Odd Fellow by the name of Terry, who died crossing the plains from Wisconsin to Oregon, continued on to Oregon with regalia, rituals and robes and presented them to Chemeketa lodge in 1853.

The speaker traced the spread of Odd Fellowship from Oregon to Washington and then to his state, Idaho. Earlier he had noted that the grand master of the Oregon jurisdiction 88 years ago came to Idaho to start their first lodge under the jurisdiction of Oregon — it was Pioneer lodge No. 1, established at Idaho City March 14, 1864.

In conclusion Horn told the group that the IOOF in Idaho were proud of the fact that they were sons and daughters of Oregon.

During the reception the visitors were welcomed to Salem and given a greeting by both Gov. Douglas McKay and Mayor Al Loucks.

McKay told the group that it was important that in these days there be an organization such as the IOOF and reminded them of their duties as citizens, among the most important of which was that of voting. He told them he was more afraid of the apathy of people today than of any of the enemy.

Loucks after welcoming the group to Salem urged them to take an interest in their municipal area and government and to know what their councilmen were doing and for what they stood, as well as, taking an interest in what was going on in Washington, D.C.

Responses were given by George Lyons, grand master; Mary S. Allen, president of the Rebekah assembly; Maj. Gen. Roy V. Terney, department commander; Lady Garnet Draper, president Ladies auxiliary Patriots Militant; and George Houck, grand patriarch.

Musical numbers and a skit completed the program which preceded the dance. Master of ceremonies for the program was Marion Curry of Salem.

Premier Pinay kissed Eisenhower on both cheeks after affixing the decoration. In a speech he lauded the American general for his "splendid human and military qualities," during World War II.

Recalling that Gen. Eisenhower, after fulfilling his mission of liberation, had returned when peace "was again menaced," Pinay said:

"By the nobility and the loftiness of his vision, his inspiring faith in the possibilities, the resources and the destinies of the free peoples, his understanding of the problems of international cooperation, he instilled in the forces placed under his orders the spirit of emulation, solidarity and unity which should inspire the 14 nations of the Atlantic pact in their effort at collective security to assure their common defense and preservation of peace."

By-pass Road

The route for the southern end of the by-pass highway will extend south to a point at Mill creek where a bridge will be constructed, thence to Turner road, where the by-pass will go under the roadway, thence over the main line of the Southern Pacific railway. From this point the by-pass roadway will extend in southwesterly direction with an overpass structure over Pringle road, terminating at a point near Battle creek where there will be a three-way traffic interchange, allowing traffic going south, north and into Sa-

Wednesday morning the Odd Fellows Grand Lodge of Oregon opened its session here with a breakfast at the Senator hotel for past grand masters, past grand patriarchs, past grand representatives and past department commanders.

Their special session which followed was devoted to the conferring of Grand Lodge degrees and a regular business session followed. Immediately after noon they joined the Rebekahs at the Crystal Gardens for a joint memorial service, after which the IOOF convened for a regular business session at the Odd Fellows Temple.

Tours of places of interest claimed their time the latter part of the afternoon and at 5 p.m. the secretaries, scribes and clerks will hold a banquet at the Golden Pheasant. Following the parade Chemeketa lodge No. 1, which since its organization 100 years ago has been meeting regularly every Wednesday without ever missing a meeting, will hold its regular meeting at the Crystal Gardens.

Rebekahs, who Tuesday started their annual session here Wednesday morning had their president's breakfast at the Senator hotel and at 9 a.m. opened joint memorial service with the Odd Fellows they adjourned for the day and left for various tours which had been arranged for them. Wednesday evening following the parade a special meeting of Salem Rebekah Lodge No. 1, is being held at the Salem armory.

Thursday's sessions will bring the grand session to an end with the Rebekah's and the IOOF both setting adjournment for after the joint installation of officers at the Crystal Gardens Thursday afternoon.

A number of different pairs of colored lights, if seen together, will produce white light.

3 Chinese POW

Boatner said Wei and 11 other prisoners were permitted to visit the cemetery where the slain Chinese were buried.

Wei made a "lot of demands that had no reference to the incident," Boatner told a news conference. The American general added:

"I answered him in Chinese and his teeth almost fell out. I told him I could make no statements until an investigation had been completed."

The camp commander said about 400 prisoners had been brought to Koje Tuesday from the POW enclosure near Pusan where Allied guards quelled rioting prisoners.

The U. S. Eighth army at Seoul said combat-wise American infantrymen used concussion grenades and a show of force to put down violence Tuesday at the Pusan POW hospital.

Speed Limited — The county court has been informed by the state highway commission that a reduction in speed has become effective on Highway 99E at the southern boundary of Salem. A 30-mile speed limit has been placed on the highway from the city limits to Radcliff drive and 45 miles an hour between Radcliff drive and Boone road, south of the 12th street junction.
