

Accretion on River Increases Park Area

The contour of the Willamette river has changed much since 1862 that the bequest of Paul B. Wallace to the city of Salem for a westside park is larger than the 14 acres mentioned in the Wallace will.

A survey made of the area by the city engineering department at the request of the new city park board reveals that the area is actually about 21 acres.

The accretion that has expanded the area has occurred mainly in the area now spanned by the Center street and the Marion street bridges and the Southern Pacific bridge.

The elevation of the added accretion is practically the same as other parts of the area and can be beautified and used for park purposes except when flood stage of the river may cover it.

The portion of the Wallace will bequeathing the property was dated May 31, 1951.

Just how the proposed park development will be worked into the westside highway scheme hasn't yet been decided in detail by the park board and city officials.

Mark Astrup, chairman of the board, announces that the board will visit all city park areas on Saturday, June 28.

The board has set its regular meeting dates for the third Thursday of each month, at 4 o'clock, in the city council chambers. The meetings will be public.

"We want the meetings to be a sounding board where the ideas of anyone can be heard and considered," Chairman Astrup said.

Dam to Make

The Forest Service, under this proposed plan, will assume responsibility for administration and future development of these areas as well as management for recreation within the forest boundary.

Under the terms of the tentative plan there will be a public service area between the highway and parapet wall on the right abutment of Detroit dam, providing an excellent view of the reservoir, the dam and the lower canyon.

An overlook is also proposed on the right abutment of Big Cliff dam, with a paving parking area.

A picnic area at Tumble Creek included in the plan would provide 50 picnic units, including stoves, tables, water supply system, sanitary and electrical facilities, a boat launching ramp and foot trail construction.

The Sauer Creek camp is planned for overnight camping, with 40 individual parking spurs, and picnic facilities similar to that planned in the Tumble Creek picnic area.

The plan of recreation improvement proposes use of the existing entrance road into the present Camp Mongold for a boat-launching ramp and construction of a turnaround and parking facilities near the reservoir shoreline.

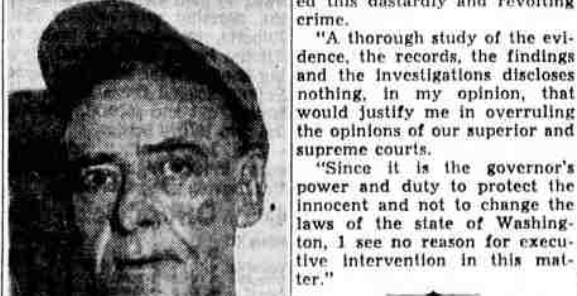

Oakes said that additional future development is based on an anticipated increase in the volume of public use and consists of expansion or modification of existing facilities at initially developed areas.

550 Reds Killed The U.S. Eighth Army said the Reds suffered 550 killed and about 350 wounded. This raised to more than 3,000 Communist casualties in bloody fighting for the key hills.

American casualties were not announced. U.S. Fifth Air Force headquarters said Allied planes shot down or damaged eight Red planes during the past week with only two U.N. plane losses.

Harwood Kept In Isolation Although some Oregon State penitentiary guards are of the belief that George Harwood, returned there Friday after conviction of the slaying of a fellow inmate, is in danger from other inmates, Deputy Warden Gene Halley said today that it is usual to hear those rumors.

Harwood, the 60-year-old lifer who fatally stabbed youthful Claude Clark Worley, 16, a fellow prisoner.

New Charges Faced By Alleged Spy

London (AP)—Britain filed four new charges of spying Saturday against William Martin office radio operator accused of spying for Russia.

Magistrate's court ordered Marshall held without bail. The prosecution said highly secret documents had been found on him and the government wanted him in custody until his trial.

Marshall was arrested last Friday night accused of passing information "useful to an enemy" to Pavel Kuznetsov, second secretary of the Soviet Embassy, on "divers dates and at divers places."

Three of the new charges said the tall, sallow-faced youth passed similar information to Kuznetsov on April 23 at Kingston, May 19 at Wimbledon and June 13—the day of his arrest—at Wandsworth, where he was picked up. All three places are London suburbs.

Halley said he is in solitary confinement, in the segregation sector of the penitentiary, and that there is little likelihood of an assault on him by inmates.

Over 500 Girls Here for Assembly of Theta Rho

More than 500 teen-age girls, advisers, and members of the Rebekah lodge convened in Salem Friday for the first Theta Rho Assembly of Oregon.

The sessions close this afternoon with the election and installation of officers for the 1953 assembly.

Meetings in the IOOF hall have been attended by delegates representing 42 Theta Rho clubs in the state. Mrs. Robert G. Henderson, Salem, a past president of the Rebekah assembly of Oregon, was mistress of ceremonies for the opening session. Mayor A. W. Loucks also welcomed the girls.

The formal institution of the assembly and election of officers for 1952 were the highlights of the Friday business.

The first assembly's officers are LaVern Thompson, Corvallis, president; Irene Phillips, Estacada, vice-president; Patricia Schroyer, Salem, secretary; Joan Thomas, Portland, treasurer; Kay Meakler, Portland, warden; Patricia Ardinger, Bend, conductor; Sally Hitehman, Warrenton, marshal; Roberta John, Roseburg, chaplain; Mary Williams, Bay City, musician; Dorothy Earl, Florence, inside guardian; Amelia Stimpson, Myrtle Creek, outside guardian; Barbara Stinnett, Corvallis, and Berniece Muller, Jefferson, right and left supporter to the president; Jody Johnson, Boring, and Lona Harless, Molalla, right and left supporter to the vice-president; Betty Doekweiler, Huntington, Ann Matheus, Fossil, Audrey Lehman, Culver and Ollie May Wallace, McMinnville, first, second, third, and fourth heralds; Joanne Brown, Salem, president's page; Connie Reeves, Merrill, vice-president's page.

The officers were installed by Mrs. Velma Herman, with the board of control assisting.

Farmers Sue for Forest Spray Damage

Portland (AP)—DDT spray intended for timber infested with spruce budworm fell instead on farm croplands, two Union county farmers charged Friday in filing suit for damages against the federal government.

Floyd W. May asks $1,513 and Clarence J. Eckstein asks $995. They said it was during the 1950 spraying activities that planes operated by Tyler Flight Service of Baltimore, under contract to the government, damaged hay and grain crops. They say the government was negligent in not marking crop lands.
