Airport at Crater Lake Park Asked Despite Old-Time Ban

Construction of a landing strip in Crater Lake National park to accommodate the aviation tourist industry in Oregon will be proposed to the National Park Service, the state board of Aeronautics said Tuesday.

A park service regulation, almost as old as aviation itself, now forbids the landing of aircraft within the boundaries of national parks.

William M. Bartlett, director of the state board, branded the rule as "assinine" and a relic of the horse and buggy days.

He said he has been directed to "investigate proceedings" at once to abolish the ruling and take steps to establish a recreational and emergency landing strip within the park boundaries in southern Oregon.

Bartlett said the first step would be a preliminary site investigation by the board in cooperation with the district engineer of the civil aeronautics administration to find a suitable location for the strip.

Later, the board would make a formal request to the parks service for a use-permit to build the landing strip at state expense.

Pilots have reported to the board that an ideal site exists near the rim of the lake and within walking distance of the lodge.

At present, the closest landing strip to Crater Lake is at Beaver Marsh, on Highway 97 south of Chemult.

If the park service abandons its long-standing policy, it would allow Oregon to build its

Truck Drivers Use Lingo Of Their Own on the Road

By HARMON W. NICHOLS

Washington, D.C.—The truck driver put on his "cinchers" as he narrowly missed a "broom wagon" which had "dropped a lug."

That doesn't mean much to you, probably, but to the hardy fellows who pilot the mighty fleet of trucks across the highways it could be translated simply:

"The truck driver put on his brakes as he narrowly missed a nitro-glycerine truck which had stopped to change a tire."

These men, considered the safest drivers on the road, are like the jet pilots—they have a lingo all of their own.

The drivers, it appears, would rather call a spade something else.

An "Armstrong starter" is in reality a crank handle. A "bareback" is a tractor without a trailer.

When you stop, you "beach it," and a "bedstead" is a sleepy pilot, good only for day-time driving.

A vehicle that needs to be towed in is said to be "broke to lead."

"Friendly fenders" are broken fenders that wave in the wind.

The driver who makes a racket while shifting gears is a "gear fighter."

A hard-riding truck is a "kidney buster," and noisy brakes are "cop callers." The live-stock truck is a "bull hauler," and the drunken driver is the "undertaker's friend."

A guy who doesn't dim his lights is known variously as a "foggy driver," a "blind driver" or a "stargazer."

When you "dog track," you are riding along with the wheels out of line. The "Lochinvar" is the driver who thinks it's smart to drive only with one hand.

When you speed, you "floor-board," and when you crank a truck you "shake down her ashes."

This sort of language is used commonly by truckers all over

Eugene TV Location Placed on Nov. Ballot

Eugene (AP)—It's up to the people of this city to decide whether or not television stations will be permitted to use the top of Spencer butte — part of a city park—for transmission facilities.

The council has placed the TV issue on the November 4 general election ballot. Since the park belongs to the public, council members decided to put the problem to a vote.

This Bus Rider Wakens Sitting On a Bonfire

Chicago (AP)—Imagine Allen Schmidt's surprise when he awoke to find himself sitting on a bonfire aboard a crowded rush hour bus.

Schmidt, a 25-year-old chemist, told police he had no idea what caused his rayon trousers to ignite as he dozed on his way home from work Tuesday. Neither did anyone else.

Police swept up the remains of the trousers and took them to a laboratory in hopes of finding the answer.

Schmidt was taken to a hospital with second degree burns.

One of the purposes of early automobile clubs was to overcome antagonism of livery stable operators who frequently barred "horseless carriages" from their premises.

Heard about "RPM"?..Users say it doubles engine life

LUMBERMAN REPORTS "half the wear in nearly twice the mileage"

Most of us measure engine wear by figuring the miles since the last overhaul—but a mechanic figures it with a micrometer. A mechanic at Timber Products Co., Medford, Ore., checked the wear records of four engines. Three averaged .018" wear in 75,000 miles. The fourth, using Heavy Duty "RPM," showed only half the wear in 130,000 miles—nearly twice the mileage. Timber Products Co. says, "RPM" cut wear to the point where it more than doubled engine life. Reduce your repair bills! Change to Heavy Duty "RPM."
