Zone Hearings Not Far Away

Hearings may start the latter part of February on revision of the Salem zoning map and code.

This was the word at a meeting of the planning and zoning commission Tuesday night when a preliminary report of the special committee headed by Robert Stanley was accepted. Final approval will not be given until the hearings have been finished.

The revision will add several new ones to the present four basic zones.

The new ones will include probably small-lot residential areas, neighborhood business districts, and a breakdown of the industrial classification.

The commission heard a complaint from James Teed and Philip Evans that the manufacturing firm of Reinholdt & Lewis is encroaching on residential properties in the 21st and Bellevue district and causing a reduced valuation of their properties. The commission advised Teed and Evans to take the complaint to the city council and the city attorney.

A recommendation was made that the city council cooperate with the Marion county court by sharing a $3000 appropriation for land use surveys, to be started before the county budgets in July for a county planning program.

Woman Hurt in Albany Wreck

Lebanon — Mrs. Ray Gleason will be in the community hospital for about a week as the result of a three car accident Friday night near the intersection of Russell Dr. and highway 20, in Lebanon.

Ray Gleason was treated for minor injuries and released, but Mrs. Gleason is reported to have scalp injuries, a broken finger and body bruises.

State police report that Lloyd Hauck, Lebanon, had stopped to allow oncoming traffic to pass before turning left into the drive. A second car, driven by James Dargan, Sweet Home, pulled to a stop behind the Hauck machine. Gleason apparently failed to see the halted vehicles and smashed into the Dargan car, driving it ahead into Hauch's auto.

50 Pigs Saved From Flood on Pudding River

Woodburn — About 50 pigs belonging to Ivan Brundidge were rescued from the Pudding river flood Monday by a group of neighbors.

Mr. Brundidge had planned to bring his pigs up from the river bottom Monday morning but when he went to get them they were marooned and inaccessible. His call for help brought about a dozen of the neighbors with motor boats and other craft and the job of rescue began about nine o'clock and continued until the middle of the afternoon.

Only the snouts of the pigs were visible as the water continued to rise and they had to be tied and brought out of the pasture by threes and fours, fighting all the way.

Neighbors taking part in the rescue included, Donald McNulty, Herbert and Gilbert Ramage, Oliver Roth, Blaine, Ralph and Norman Seely, Gail Wengenroth, Leorard Larson, O. A. Parton, Alvin McLaughlin and Charles Fanning.

To make the affair more like a picnic, clam chowder and coffee was served to the workers by Mrs. Parton, Mrs. Brudidge, Mrs. Blane Seely and Mrs. John Ramage.
